Morgan Says British Purchased U. S. Arms Under Pressure in '16

Testifies London Tried to Break Contract for 55 Millions.

U. S. Favor Bought, Questioners Insist

Senators Told 300-Million Loan Followed Compromise.

By Felix Bruner.

Pursuing its attempt to show that munition sales and war financing had much to do with the eventual attitude of the United States in the World War, the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday continued questioning J. P. Morgan and Thomas W. Lamont, Morgan partner.

Developments included:

An effort by the committe to establish by persistent questioning and the introduction of numerous documents, its contention that British war financing in this country depended upon continued purchase of munitions from concerns to which some of the banks had made heavy loans.

A statement by J. P. Morgan & Co. showing it had only a negligible interest in 14 of the 900 companies from which it bought $3,000,000,000 worth of materials as purchasing agent for Great Britain and France, before the United States entered the war.

While the committee continued its investigation, intended to supply the groundwork for neutrality legislation, both the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee continued their consideration of the Administration neutrality bill.

Dig Into British Incident.

Much of the day was devoted by the munitions committee to inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the attempt of Great Britain to cancel a $55,000,000 rifle contract with American manufacturers. Both Morgan and Lamont agreed that if Great Britain had treated the manufacturers unfairly that country would have had considerable difficulty in floating further loans in this country.

The contract finally was compromised by Morgan and Henry P. Davison, Morgan partner, and almost immediately afterward, on October 30, 1916, a $300,000,000 United Kingdom loan was asked of the public in the United States.

Great Britain had contracted to take 3,400,000 rifles from American manufacturers. After 1,600,000 had been shipped, an effort was made to cancel the contract. The agreement finally reached was for the shipment of 2,000,000 rifles, upon a guarantee that the British government would pay the cost of the arms.

Cablegram Quoted.

In this connection a cablegram to the Morgan office in London from the company here said:

"Effect of any action taken by British government, which contractors believed unfair and arbitrary, would, in our judgment, be far-reaching, and might go so far as to affect adversely and seriously further British financial operations in this country, as well as to lead other manufactureres of munitions, etc., to seek to protect themselves in future negotiations by demanding higher prices and generally opposing onerous conditions.

"In other words, if Ministry Munitions War were to proceed with these cancellations strictly in accordance with contract terms and without regard to the rights claimed by the contractors, a situation might well arise where the British government would lose more in the long run than it would gain by effecting these cancellations."

Morgan Explains Stand.

Asked as to the implications of this statement, Morgan said:

"The British had to satisfy the financial community they would deal fairly and correctly with the rifle manufacturers. We weren't inviting the British government to do anything they shouldn't do."

"It seems to me that there was a direct tie-up between the diplomacy of you people and the diplomacy of the State Department," Stephen Raushenbush, secretary of the committee, commented.

"At that time," Lamont replied, "the British were perhaps planning to send over collateral for a further loan. We were thinking of every-

50 Marine Corps Planes Hop For Indies Today at Quantico

102 Officers and Men to Remain in San Juan for Month's Tests.

One of the most ambitious mass flights in the history of military aviation will be started today when 50 Marine Corps fighting planes hop off from Quantico, Va., on a 2,400-mile trip to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Details of the extensive maneuver, designed to test the striking power of flying units operating a great distance from their base, have been carefully guarded at Marine Corps headquarters here. However, it was learned last night that the pilots will remain in the Carribean area a little more than a month, carrying out various exercises, including survey trips, gunnery and bombing.

Leaving Quantico at 8 a. m. this morning, provided unusually bad weather conditions do not delay them, the pilots will fly to Miami, Fla. From there they will proceed to Camaguey and Moron, Cuba; Port au Prince, Haiti; Santo Domingo and finally San Juan.

In addition to establishing headquarters in the Puerto Rican capital, the Marine officers will set up flight bases on the island of Culebra and at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands.

A total of 102 men will be carried in the 50 planes, 47 of them being officers and the remainder enlisted men. A service organization comprising 100 men already is en route on board the Navy transport, Antares.

Harris & Ewing.
COL. ROSS ROWELL.

Col. Ross E. Rowell, chief of Marine Corps Aviation, is in direct supervision of the aerial maneuveds. The flight will be headed by Lieut. Col. Roy S. Geiger. Squadron commanders include Maj. Tex Rogers, Capt. William Wallace, Capt. Byron Johnson and Capt. C. F. Schilt. Maj. Claude A. Larkin will serve as executive officer

Swanson Names Adm. Hepburn Chief of Fleet

He Will Succeed Reeves; Leahy Chosen Leader of Battle Force.

A series of changes in the high command of the Navy announced yesterday by Secretary Swanson will send Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn to the post of commander in chief of the United States Fleet. Now on duty as commander of the scouting force, Admiral Hepburn will succeed Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, who will retire from active duty in December. The transfer is effective in June. As yet orders have not been issued for Admiral Reeves' future duty, but it is expected that he will end his long naval career at the Navy Department as a member of the general board.

Stirling to Retire.

Othr changes announced by Secretary Swanson yesterday were:

Vice Admiral William D. Leahy, now commanding the battleships of the fleet, will become commander of the battle force, replacing Admiral Harris Laning.

Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, commandant of the Third Naval District in New York, will be retired. His post will be filled by Admiral Laning.

Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, commandant of the Eleventh Naval District at San Diego, Calif., will succeed Vice Admiral Hepburn as commander of the scouting force.

Rear Admiral Clarence S. Kempff, now commanding Battleship Division 1 of the battle force, will succeed Admiral Leahy as commander of battleships.

Vice Admiral Henry V. Butler, commander of aircraft of the battle force, will be relieved in June by Rear Admiral Frederick J. Horne, now commander of aircraft of the base force.

Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the bureau of aeronautics at the Navy Department, will succeed Rear Admiral Horne as commander of aircraft, base force.

Rear Admiral Joseph R. DeFrees, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, will relieve Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole as commander of the submarine force.

After announcing the new appointments Secretary Swanson said there would be other changes of flag officers of the fleet effective in June.

Italian Troops Rebel; 2 Slain, Others Are Shot

Officers Fire On 500 Men on Refusal to Board Train for War.

By the United Press.

London, Jan. 8.— Two Italian soldiers were killed and several wounded tonight when their officers opened fire on 500 men of the Italian Alpine Regiment who refused to entrain for service in Ethiopia, the Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Innsbruck reported on reliable information from Merano, South Tyrol.

The Alpine Regiment, comprising 17,000 men, was ordered to Ethiopia several days ago. Advance units already have sailed for East African duty.

When the troops were ordered to parade, only 18 responded, the dispatch said, while the remainder adopted a threatening attitude and tore down several bayoneted pictures of Premier Mussolini.

Officers reportedly announced that dissenters would be take aboard the train under escort, and then were forced to fire to have their orders obeyed.

At the station, men threw down their equipment and shouted insults at Mussolini and condemned his East African war, the report asserted.

It is reported that 1,650 recruits already have fled from South Tyrol —former Austrian territory which was given to Italy by the Treaty of Versailles—to Germany and Austria.

A dispatch from an Innsbruck news agency confirmed trouble between Italian officers and men, and said the incident occurred December 26. This account, however, said that only one officer fired on his men and that a soldier's striking his superior provoked the act.

James Roosevelt Pays Tribute to Al Smith

Boston, Jan. 8 (AP).—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, at a Jackson Day dinner here tonight attacked Republican methods of raising campaign funds and paid tribute to former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York.

Smith is expected to blast the New Deal at a forthcoming dinner of the American Liberty League to be held in Washington.

Hauptmann Pleads for Chance To Face N. J. Pardon Board

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 8.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said tonight Bruno Richard Hauptmann, awaiting death in the electric chair a week from next Friday, had requested an opportunity to appear personally before the Court of Pardons Saturday "to answer all questions."

The Governor said the request was unusual, and expressed doubt Hauptmann would be permitted to appear. He said he would discuss the matter with Chancellor Luther A. Campbell, the State's highest judicial officer and member of the pardons court.

The letter, dated January 3 and in Hauptmann's handwriting, was sent to the Governor through C. Lloyd Fisher, defense attorney.

It follows:

"I would like an opportunity to appear before the honorable board of pardons when they consider my case, and be given a chance to answer all questions the court may care to ask me."

Although the Governor has been studying the voluminous trial record, and examining many of the records, he said tonight he had no intention now of staying the execution.

"It is not my present intention of granting a reprieve," he said. "My present information is that I do not have the power."

Hoffman confirmed reports that he had obtained from the State police numerous exhibits in the Lindbergh case, including the chisel found on the Lindbergh estate near

Paris, London Order Fleets Strengthened

92 French Ships, British Flotilla to Be Sent to Mediterranean.

Italian Threat Seen if League Votes Oil Ban Jan. 20.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 8.—Great Britain and France moved suddenly today to increase their naval strengths in and around the Mediterranean.

They will do so at the time the Council of the League of Nations meets in Geneva January 20, when a proposed oil sanction against Italy is to come up for consideration.

France will send two squadrons, involving a total of 92 warships, to the Mediterranean. The British Twenty-first Destroyer Flotilla, accompanied by four men-of-war of the home fleet, will hold a "spring cruise" near Gibraltar and replacements will be made which will strengthen the Mediterranean fleet.

This unexpected maneuver, which appeared to be a move to draw a strong naval ring around Italy, quickly revived speculation in responsible circles of London that oil sanctions are now likely and that the powers are preparing for eventualities in case of an act of desperation on the part of Premier Mussolini.

"Pure Coincidence."

The British vigorously asserted it was pure coincidence that the fleet announcements were made in London and Paris almost simultaneously.

But observers noted the move closely followed Italian Red Cross bombings in Ethiopia and a disclosure the British and French general staffs had worked out technical arrangements for mutual assistance under Article XVI, paragraph 3, of the League Covenant. The British let it be known that the general staff arrangements constituted a secret document which it was not to the interest of either country to publish.

Feeling grew in diplomatic circles that angry small nations, perhaps headed by Sweden, will go to Geneva, demanding that oil sanctions be invoked forthwith. (Sweden is aroused over the bombing of a Swedish Red Cross unit in Ethiopia by Italian planes.)

The French naval maneuver sends a huge number of vessels into the Mediterranean later this month.

The British move is limited to strengthening the large fleet already stationed there through an exchange of ships, giving the empire additional tonnage in the troubled sector. Simultaneously, British transports are converging at Southampton to embark additional British troops for foreign duty.

Replacement ships, while not actually entering the Mediterranean, will take up stations at Gibraltar, guarding the entrance to that sea. From there they could steam to Malta or elsewhere in case of necessity.

Maneuvers Limited.

The exchange gives the British an additional aircraft carrier carrying three squadrons of planes and hundreds of aircraft men for duty adjacent to Gibraltar. Aerial strength in and around Cairo has been estimated by responsible quarters at between 300 and 500 airplanes.

The exchange also gives the British an additional 10,000 tons of fighting craft in the affected zone, not counting the strength of the Twenty-first destroyer flotilla, which is accompanying four large ships on what was prosaically called the "spring cruise."

This cruise will not go into the Mediterranean, but the Mediterranean fleet this year will not join in the usual Atlantic maneuvers.

The cruise begins January 13 and gets fresh ships to the vicinity of Gibraltar well before the Twentieth, when the Council meets. Among ships going to Gibraltar are the battleships Nelson and Rodney, among the world's most formidable warcraft, and the only ones in the British navy carrying 16-inch guns, in addition to lesser armament.

The battle-cruiser Hood and the battleship Ramillies, recalled to England, will give their crews shore leave. They were rushed to Gibraltar in mid-September during the height of the pre-war alarm.

Moon Eclipse Draws Gun Fire From Turks

Istanbul, Jan. 8 (AP).—Many ignorant and superstitious Turks fired thousands of shots during a total eclipse of the moon tonight, beginning at 7:58 and ending at 10:21 p. m.

In accordance with Oriental legend they believed Satan, in the shape of a dragon, was devouring the moon and they wished to frighten or kill him.

Asmara, Eritrea, Jan. 8 (AP).—A total eclipse of the moon tonight terrified Italy's native soldiers. White officers patiently explained the cause of the phenomenon to dissipate the fears of the Askaris that their god was frowning in wrath upon them.

Army Accepts Blimp, One of World's Biggest

Belleville, Ill., Jan. 8 (AP).—Acceptance by the Army after 23 test flights of the TC-14, one of the largest nonrigid dirigibles in the world, was announced today by Lieut. Col. Frank M. Kennedy, commanding officer of Scott Field.

The ship, powered with three 300-horsepower radial motors, is capable of cruising for three days and nights, carrying a crew of eight men. Its top speed is in excess of 85 miles an hour.

It is 237 feet long and 67 feet in diameter and has abelium capacity of 360,000 cubic feet.

'We'll Not Retreat,' Roosevelt Tells $50-a-Plate Party Aids; House Starts Salvage of AAA

Committee Asks Ruling on Validity of Crop Agreements.

5 Substitute Plans Offered for Study

Administration's Action Delayed for Farm Chief's Parley.

By Robert C. Albright.

An attempt to salvage little-used licensing features of the AAA act, to be thrown into the void created by Supreme Court invalidation of farm production control, was launched late yesterday by the House Agriculture Committee.

While the Administration deferred a specific action, the committee took the bit in its own teeth and directed legal advisors to render a "well-considered opinion" on validity of "orders," licenses and marketing agreements under the original and amended AAA acts.

The move gained added significance later in the day, when the Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced that licenses and orders governing marketing agreements are in no way affected by the Supreme Court's sweeping decision. Field agents of the general crop and dairy section were notified to continue operation of licenses and agreements now in existence.

Jones Calls Committee.

The search for an adequate substitute for farm production control gained unexpected momentum when Chairman Marvin Jones called his House Agriculture Committee into session to begin tentative preperation of legislation filling the farm program breach.

The committee's conference, entirely independent of Administration moves, was notable for its departure from methods followed in the last two Roosevelt sessions. Instead of waiting for the Administration to send up its own bill, as has been the customary procedure in the recent past, the House group returned to its old freedom of normal legislative action. In effect, it served notice that the House will frame its own bill.

The AAA in the meantime became embroiled in a controversy with farm program critics, and decided to debar all such from attending tomorrow's conference of farm leaders.

In addition to the House Committee investigation directed into marketing licenses and orders, five alternative proposals were put forward and briefly discussed.

They were:

The old export debenture plan.

Various domestic allotment methods.

Conference Planned.

Appropriations for land leasing by the Federal Government, such as was contemplated under the soil conservation program.

Appropriations to individual farmers conditioned on evidence that he has reduced his production in line with the old AAA program.

The Administration itself had nothing to offer pending a conference here with 70 farm leaders on Friday.

"We want to get the counsel of the wise leaders of agriculture," Secretary Henry A. Wallace said yesterday following a luncheon conference with President Roosevelt at the White House.

There was continued shying away from former Administration threats of a Constitutional amendment to meet the present dilemma.

Chairman Jones said his committee is making an effort to bring out a bill strictly "within the limits of the Constitution."

"We feel that a way can be found, within limits set by the Supreme Court, to fashion a farm program that will at least in a measure offset the disadvantages which the farmers now have under the national tariff system," Jones told reporters.

To Consider Provisions.

"The committee authorized the drafting of various provisions for consideration of members. We expect to have before the committee the various methods that have been suggested and from these prepare, after careful consideration, the best possible measure to accomplish the desired end."

Meanwhile, Congressional Republicans were not napping. Although House Agriculture committee proceedings were on a strictly nonpartisan basis, Republicans were avidly studying the Supreme Court decision in the light of a program they can espouse. To this end, a Republican House conference may shortly be called by Republican House Leader Bertrand H. Snell. The Senate Minority Leader lost no time in striking in the Senate with his three-way bill, calling for alternative application of the export debenture, domestic allotment and equalization fee plans.

After sounding out Republican sentiment in the House yesterday, Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Agriculture Committee, introduced a bill authorizing appropriation of $300,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay all outstanding contracts under which farm control compliance has been met by farmers. His bill would go even farther, and author-

Bonus Set for House Debate; Passage Expected Tomorrow

Open Rule Adopted to Permit 5-Hour Discussion on Veteran-Backed Measure Today; Conference in Senate Delays Action.

Sped by an open rule, allowing five hours' debate, the Vinson-Patman-McCormack bill for cash payment of the bonus, backed by combined organized veterans' strength, will be called up in the House today and passed probably late tomorrow, House leaders said last night.

Final decision to rush the full payment bill to a House vote before the week-end came as a Senate conference between veterans' leaders and interested Senators adjourned without reaching a conclusion on the course of probable Senate action.

Expected word from the White House was not forthcoming at the Senate conference. As a result, it was said to be highly likely that a revised version of the united veterans' bill will be jointly introduced in the Senate by Senators Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon.

Bill Held Essential.

Carrying a report declaring the bonus bill "an essential part of recovery," Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, appeared before the House Rules Committee yesterday and obtained permission to call up the Vinson-Patman-McCormack bill in the House today.

Avoiding "gag" tactics, the Rules Committee reported a resolution sanctioning one-hour's debate on the rule, and four hours' debate on the bill, which will be open to germane amendments.

Under the plan of action approved yesterday, the independent offices appropriations bill now under consideration will be laid aside to permit expedition of the bonus vote.

Led by independent and "Progressive" House factions, a fight to "liberalize" the bill will be launched tomorrow, but leaders declared they have strength to pass the bill largely in the form reported by the committee.

Fights Relief Curt

One of the amendments projected by some so-called "Progressive" House members is expected to inject the inflation method of financing the bonus, temporarily laid aside by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas. Probability is it will be easily defeated, if offered, on a point of order, questioning its germaneness.

One amendment that will be advanced by Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, will seek to guard against removal from the relief rolls of those vet-

Decline Begins In Food Prices At Stores Here

The first broad march downward in food prices, resulting from the Supreme Court's outlawing of AAA crop controls, began in Washington yesterday.

Millers and refiners reduced their prices on wheat, flour, sugar and rice to wholesalers making new contracts. While the reductions will not affect existing flour stocks, on which processing taxes have already been paid, such stocks should be used up within periods ranging from a week to three weeks. Reductions to consumers will follow gradually, it was predicted yesterday.

Revision Expected.

Not all wholesalers learned of the reduction simultaneously, but several confirmed reductions to them on wheat flour prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.36 a barrel, on sugar from 15 cents to 25 cents per 100 pounds, and one told of a rice cut of 75 cents per 100 pounds.

M. E. Horton, president of M. E. Horton, Inc., affiliated with the Terminal Supply Co., wholesale grocers, commented:

"It may not be such a blessing. We've had quite a nice increase in business in the last two years, and we were getting to the point of profitable margin again. Business conditions had improved. Now we don't know what to expect."

On at least two other commodities, retailers were anticipating price revisions. Dry goods buyers were heading for New York to learn of the AAA decision's effect on cotton prices. Meat dealers

California Desert Is Combed For Missing Brooklyn Boy, 12

By the Associated Press.

Indio, Calif., Jan. 8.—Officers and volunteers searched tonight in lonely Painted Canyon and adjacent barren desert wastelands for 12-year-old Alfred Altman, son of a Brooklyn, N. Y., manufacturer, who has been missing since late Tuesday.

No trace of the boy, son of Joseph Altman, of Brooklyn, was found in an all-night search by sheriff's deputies last night.

New groups were organized today in a redoubled effort to rescue him from the rigors of another desert night.

Alfred, his governess and other members of their party, drove into Painted Canyon yesterday to hunt for curios and semi-precious stones. He became separated from the others.

The governess, Miss Miriam Reed, 24, told officers she, her brother, Charles, and their cousin, Horton Renicke, hunted in vain for him long after sunset yesterday. The sheriff's office sent deputies into the region to continue the search last night and today.

The canyon, in southern California's Imperial Valley, is noted for its brilliant coloration; it and the desert lands are barren and devoid of human habitation.

Miss Reed, a psychology student at Columbia University, told Deputy Sheriff Ben de Crouzcour the lad was given into her care two years ago because he was suffering from a nervous disorder.

They came to Los Angeles two months ago on a leisurely tour for his health, she said, and have been living in the hills near Hollywood.

2 Court Opinions Called 'Most Momentous Ever Given.'

President Is Silent On Future Course

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Describing the Supreme Court's AAA rulings as "two of the most momentous opinions—the majority and the minority—ever rendered in a case" before the high tribunal, President Roosevelt last night declared to tens of thousands of Democratic Party workers throughout the country that "we will not retreat."

But the President, speaking at the $50-a-plate Jackson Day dinner here, did not indicate what line of action he would pursue in the face of that decision, except to assert that "it is enough to say that the attainment of justice and a continuation of prosperity for American agriculture remains an immediate and constant objective of my Administration."

He declared that "the ultimate results of the language of these opinions (still referring to both majority and minority opinions) will profoundly affect the lives of Americans for years to come," but he explained that he could not—and extemporaneously he inserted the words "will not"— render "offhand judgment" without studying them with the utmost care.

Belligerency Lacking.

Without any of the belligerency which he displayed in his Friday "message" to Congress, Mr. Roosevelt referred to his political foes only in generalities. He brought cheers by asserting that "our enemies are the forces of privilege and greed within our own borders," but previously he conceded that the greater part of the businessmen and industrialists of the Nation did not want special advantages.

The President seemed to be at some pains to make it clear that on Friday night when he assailed so vehemently business and industry as an "economic oligarchy" seeking to wrest the government out of the people's hands, he referred only to "a minority in business and finance that would 'gang up' against the people's liberties."

Praised in Letters.

He did this by telling of a "very great number" of letters and telegrams which he had received from businessmen, manufacturers and bankers applauding his "message" to Congress and then by making the distinction.

Although the President said the response in the way of letters and telegrams to his Friday night speech "within a few hours" was greater than at any time "since the critical days of the spring of 1933," the only previous report on that to come from the White House was Saturday afternoon, when it was announced that 300 messages had been received, 28 of which were unfavorable.

The President in the first half of his speech drew inferentially a parallel between himself, his Administration and his difficulties, with those of Andrew Jackson, whose victory at New Orleans after the War of 1812 had ended was the anniversary the Democrats throughout the country observed last night.

Citing the difficulties which Jackson had suffered in disseminating the truth about his actions to the people, the President called on all who heard him each to constitute himself a committee of one to spread the facts and truth, and confounded those who would "mislead" the Nation.

Need Help of Youth.

He also directed the attention of the Democrats to the youth of the country, declaring the "enthusiasm and the intelligence of the youth of the land are necessary to the fulfillment of the Nation's destiny."

"As I understand the temper of the people, particularly the temper of youth," the President added, "no party of reaction, no candidates of reaction can fulfill the hope and faith of that everlasting spirit. It is the sacred duty of us who are vested with the responsibility of leadership to justify the expectations of the young men and women of America."

The President's speech in large part depended on his oratorical and histrionic ability for its appeal. Apparently realizing that as a campaign "opener," his address was

Coughlin Plans Suit to Outlaw Reserve Board

Visitor at White House; Upholds AAA Decision; Hits Bonus Bonds.

Father Charles E. Coughlin announced in Washington yesterday he is going to sue the Federal Reserve Board of the United States, attacking the constitutionality of the Federal Reserve act of 1913.

This was one of numerous announcements made by the "Radio Priest" as he strode through a crowded schedule of appointments, including a 20-minute visit to the White House for conference with President Roosevelt, which Father Coughlin described as "purely social."

Lists His Opinions.

He also expressed these opinions:

"The Supreme Court was absolutely logical in the AAA decision.

"The brainless Brain-Trusters did not know how to use the general welfare clause of the Constitution.

"Thirty million residents of 6,000,000 farms are greatly disturbed today because the Suprme Court has put the triple-A in the wastebasket of foul balls.

"I do not intend to keep aloof from the next Presidential campaign, but I consider that campaign secondary to the Congressional elections.

"The only New Deal legislation that stuck was the gold devaluation act. The others are in the wastebasket, or will be."

Has Busy Schedule.

His pink, bespectacled face beaming with health, and his lips poised to deliver grave and sonorous utterances instantly on any questions put, the "radio priest" moved rapidly around Washington.

Father Coughlin declined to name his attorneys in his suit attacking constitutionality of the Federal Reserve act and all its amendments, describing them as "two of the best-known men in the country."

In New York, Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, disclosed, according to Associated Press dispatches, that he will act as Father Coughlin's adviser in the suit.

Both are ardent inflationists and Father Coughlin has often attacked the Administration policies, financial and otherwise. He has coupled this with consistent radio assaults on the Nation's bankers. Yesterday he combined both of his comments on his contemplated suit and on the soldiers' bonus legislation now being prepared in Congress. He said:

Control Over Money.

"The suit is an attempt to restore to Congress and the American people control over money. Congress has the right to coin and issue money. I can't find anywhere in the Constitution that it may delegate that right without restrictions. Ninety-nine per cent of all money is privately owned and controlled.

"Bond payment of the soldiers' bonus is a bonus for the bankers, not the soldiers."

At his brief interview with the President, the priest said, they discussed the completion of the unfinished Church of the Little Flower, Coughlin's Michigan church. He added:

"The President asked why it wasn't finished." Asked the same question by newsmen, he explained: "It is costing so much for my National Union for Social Justice right now."

Holds Press Conference.

In the Mayflower Hotel the priest, clad in perfectly-cut clerical black, a solidly built man with nothing of the pale ascetic about him, met with newspapermen, photographers, Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts, Robert Harriss, of Harriss & Vose, New York commodity brokers, and newsreel men.

The priest, flanked by Louis Ward, his right-hand man, a small, plumpish gentleman of numerous chins, who supplies Father Coughlin with facts and figures from a prodigious memory, swept into the Pan-American room of the hotel with a firm swift stride. There he gave himself over patiently to the far from tender mercies of the newsreel cameramen and sound technicians.

Perspiring slightly as he was told the movie public wanted chiefly his opinion on the AAA decisions of th Supreme Court, he said:

"How about the bonus?"

Gets Minute and Quarter.

"Won't have time for it," growled the newsreel executive in charge. "We're giving you 60 seconds—no, a minut and a quarter—and the AAA is hottest. See?"

Father Coughlin, rapidly marshaling his thoughts, "saw."

The sound men set up the mikes, the father spoke the somewhat mystic numbers, "one, two, three, four, five—"

"Got it," bellowed a sound-man. The priest relaxed. They fixed the Kleigs until the glare blinded him, checked the focus twice, waved a handkerchief for him to start, and he broke at once with the statement about the AAA going into the "wastebasket of foul balls," adding:

"No venom should be carried against the Supreme Court for their decision. The brainless brain trusters did not know the use of the general welfare clause of the Constitution, the very men who have refused to use the Congress' power to coin and regulate money."

Gives View on Bonus.

Timed from long experience to the second's click, Father Coughlin stopped as the cameras quit grinding. Not for camera reproduction he went on against the Administration's "bonus record."

"There is no precedent in this Administration's record to believe they will have courage to issue currency for the payment of the soldiers' bonus."

Jackson Day Diners Deserved a Better Speech; Overtures to Business; 'Truth Committees.'

THOSE ardent Democrats who paid $50 here, and lesser sums elsewhere, to hear President Roosevelt open the 1936 Presidential campaign at a series of Jackson Day dinners deserved a better speech than they received. If they came to hear the enemies besetting the New Deal denounced in forthright fashion or to hear how now the President proposed to meet the newest threat to his regime in Monday's Supreme Court decision, they must have gone home disappointed.

For seldom has President Roosevelt—aside from the oratorical delivery—presented an address so devoid of substance, of color, purpose and certainty as he gave the country last night. He repeated all the generalities in his repertoire; he reiterated we must retain popular government; he asserted that "we will not retreat;" he drew a parallel inferentially between himself and Andrew Jackson as champions of the common man and he took another kick—but not too hard a kick—at "the forces of privilege and greed."

But he did not get down on the mat and grapple with his enemies; he did not go into clinches with his critics as he did on Capitol Hill Friday night before an audience that paid not a nickel to hear him. That speech should have been saved for the paying cash customers of last night. Instead, what they got was flat and an anticlimax of the speech which really opened the campaign. It was unfair to them.

* * * *

Most significant in last night's address was the President's report on the number of telegrams and letters he had received from businessmen, industrialists and bankers applauding his address of Friday night and his concession that "by far the greater part of the businessmen, industrialists and other employers of the Nation seek no special advantages; they seek only an equal opportunity to share in the benefits and the obligations of government."

The President Friday night did not draw such a distinction between the greater part of the business and industrial community and a small minority which insists on being the bad boy. Is it possible that the President since has learned that his colorful attack on the business and industrial community did not strike the responsive popular chord that he expected?

* * * *

There is one note in Mr. Roosevelt's address of last night which should be emphasized. It was his plea for a dissemination of facts throughout the Nation regarding his Administration. Mr. Roosevelt apparently fears that columnists will ridicule his proposal that those who heard him constitute themselves committees of one to spread the truth and combat falsehood.

Here is one columnist who will praise, not ridicule, the President for that suggestion. The more facts the people of the country have at their disposal in this year's Presidential campaign, the wiser will be their action when they vote. Mr. Roosevelt never spoke a truer word than when he said, "A government can be no better than the public opinion that sustains it." It is a shame that Mr. Roosevelt did not devote his Friday night address to giving facts about the New Deal, instead of indulging in invective.

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt at his press conference Tuesday and again in his speech last night referred to the "two opinions" which the Supreme Court handed down Monday on the AAA. He means the majority and the minority opinions. Apparently the Administration would like the country to regard the minority opinion as fully as important as the majority decree. But in law only the majority opinion counts. The minority opinion is just pleasant reading for those who lost.

Representative Hamilton Fish in a speech to the House yesterday compared the Jackson Day dinner at the Mayflower to the feast of Belshazzar, where the Biblical warning, "Mene, Mene, Tekel Upharsin," appeared on the wall. Paraphrasing the Biblical words, Mr. Fish said the warning to the New Dealers meant:

"'Mene'—the people have numbered thy kingdom and will end it; 'Tekel'—thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting; 'Upharsin'—thy kingdom is divided and will be given to the Republicans with the aid of deceived and disgusted Jacksonian and Jeffersonian Democrats."

House Debates Bonus Today

erans who received cash payment of the bonus.

Another amendment scheduled for a spirited row would refund interest paid in by veterans on their bonus borrowings, said to approximate $7,000,000. This was included in the original draft of the bill, but was stricken out by the House Ways and Means Committee. Unpaid interest on bonus borrowings nevertheless would be canceled, under the bill as reported.

The report of the Ways and Means Committee, made public yesterday by Chairman Doughton, asserted the committee's belief that the pending bill is "the best way to provide the immediate cash payment of the adjusted service certificates with the least immediate burden on the Treasury."

"In the judgment of the committee, immediate cash payment of the adjusted service certificates will increase the purchasing power of the Nation," the report stated. "The present policy looking toward recovery argues strongly that this debt, which is just, due and unpaid, should be paid in cash to the defenders of our country, who rendered the services and paid in their lifetime."

Support in Doubt.

Representative Doughton, at yesterday's rules committee hearing, was asked the direct question whether the bill he reported is an "Administration measure."

"Not to my knowledge," Doughton replied. "I wish it were."

Indecision in the Senate on what course to follow is said to be a direct outgrowth of ineffective efforts to ascertain what, if any, bill the President might agree to accept.

"If there is going to be a veto anyway, we want to know it, so we can write a bill that will stand the best chance of becoming a law," one Senate spokesman in veterans' matters stated.

The "united veterans" bill starting through the House mill today authorizes a full, immediate cash payment, but offers 3 per cent interest as an additional inducement to those veterans who refrain from cashing their certificates until 1945.

The Ways and Means Committee estimates the immediate cash outlay needed if the legislation is enacted at $1,282,000,000. Opponents of the measure, who are not overnumerous in the House, contend this is just so much "juggling" of figures, and in the end the full debt of $2,000,000,000 or more must be paid out of the Treasury.

Service Records Rechecked.

By the Associated Press.

The War Department reported yesterday that the discovery of errors in certain soldiers' bonus certificates had prompted a recheck of the service records of 75,000 men who served during the war as enlisted reservists.

In many cases, officials said, men were shown to have been allowed larger bonuses than allowed by law.

Most of the overpayments were said to have resulted from the fact that an undisclosed percentage of enlisted reservists were credited with active service from the date of their enlistment rather than from the actual date upon which they were called to active duty. The bonus payment is figured only on a basis of active service.

Unofficial estimates were that total reductions as high as $5,000,000 might be made.

1935 Shoe Production May Set New Peak

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Shoe production in 1935 probably topped the 361,000,000 pairs manufactured in 1929, according to a survey of the shoe and leather industry by Poor's Publishing Co.

Jobbers and retailers, who followed a hand-to-mouth purchasing policy during the depression years, are now reported stocking up in anticipation of further increases in manufacturers' prices.

76 Capital Men Among $15,000 Salary Group

Montgomery, Acacia Head, Tops List With Pay of $75,150.

Seventy-six Washingtonians were paid salaries and other compensation of more than $15,000 in 1934, according to a break-down of the Treasury's report to the House Ways and Means Committee made public yesterday.

William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Life Insurance Co., received the highest salary reported. It was $75,150. Running a close second was Edward G. Yonkers, president and treasurer of the Sanitary Grocery Co., of Washington. He was paid a total of $74,660.33 although only $35,000 was in salary. Commissions amounted to $39,660.33.

The third highest salary went to M. G. Gibbs, president of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc. It was $50,000.

None of the salaries, which were filed under the 1934 revenue act mandate, was in the class of movie and radio stars or large corporation executives. The names of no Government officials or members of Congress were listed, but it was presumed the more wealthy of them filed from their home States.

The District list included only one Washington newspaperman—David Lawrence, of the United States Daily, who reported a salary of $18,700.

Three newspaper executives, however, reported large salaries. From the Evening Star, Frank B. Noyes, president, and Theodore W. Noyes, chairman of the board, each received $42,120 for services. Fleming Newbold, as manager, got $31,543.

U. S. Gets Wave Of Complaints Against Radio

Commission Says Fake Advertising Leads the Protests.

By the Associated Press

A "notable increase" in complaints against "objectionable" radio programs was reported yesterday by the Communications Commission.

"The broadcasting of false, fraudulent and misleading advertising in various guises has been the chief cause of complaints," the commission said in its annual report.

It was said many "medical advertisers" had resorted to broadcasting "in order to disseminate their misleading and often fraudulent sales propaganda" after objectionable activities in printed form had been curtailed by Government agencies.

The commission said it had made "extensive inquiry" into complaints and had taken formal action with regard to 226 programs broadcast over 52 stations.

"Some action was taken with regard to a much larger additional number of complaints involving several more stations, but these were adjusted informally."

Turning to a discussion of television, the report said visual transmission can be carried out satisfactorily from a laboratory standpoint but "there are many commercial problems to be solved" before it can be offered to the public.

The commission said it had made numerous studies of the use of ultra-high frequencies for broadcasting, and that allotment of these channels "remains the foremost allocation problem."

Congress Split On Publication Of Big Salaries

Plan to Abandon Publicity Clause in Revenue Act Studied.

By the Associated Press.

Sentiment was divided among members of Congress yesterday on a proposal to hang a "none-of-your-business" sign on corporation salary lists submitted under the 1934 revenue act.

The discussion started with the wide-spread publicity given corporation salaries above $15,000 annually through salary lists submitted to Congress by the Treasury.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, has introduced a resolution calling for repeal of the section which permits publicity. He said so long as income tax payments are no longer made public he saw no reason why salaries should be public property.

But Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, sponsor of the publicity section, said he would oppose its repeal.

Fears Deductions.

"If salary lists are not made public," McKellar argued, "there are some corporation which would have a tendency to make large deductions from salaries and thus avoid payments of taxes.

Speaker Byrns indicated he believed a report submitted to Congress was a public document and the people had a right to examine it.

"I do not, however," said Byrns, "see any particular benefit resulting from making the salary lists public unless it gives small stockholders an opportunity to see how much money is paid out each year to top officials of corporations."

Minority Leader Snell said he was not aware the revenue act called for publication of the lists and had given no thought to possible repeal of the publicity provision.

Opposed by Doughton.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he was "not responsible for what was put in by the Senate," adding he did "not see any useful service which publication of the salary lists perform."

Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the committee, said he had "never been favorable to publication of private affairs including tax returns."

"At the same time," Treadway continued, "I have always been against excessive salaries. It seems to me when a corporation is willing to pay in the neighborhood of the salary of the President of the United States ($75,000) they should be able to hire almost anyone."

Racketeer Released.

Leavenworth, Kans., Jan. 8 (AP).—Murray Humphries, notorious Chicago racketeer, was released here today from Federal prison where he had been serving a term for income tax evasion.

Humphries paid a $5,000 fine and was received at the prison October 31, 1934, under sentence of 18 months, prison officials said 108 days was subtracted from his sentence for good behavior.

4 Die as Truck And Bus Crash On Blind Bridge

Several Others Are Injured in Indiana Accident; Investigation Opens.

By the Associated Press.

Huntington, Ind., Jan. 8.—Four passengers were killed tonight as a bus crashed into a motor transport truck on a bridge seven miles south of Huntington. The bus was en route from Fort Wayne to Indianapolis. The dead were identified as as:

Henry Muelhauser, of Chicago.

William J. Harvey, of New York City.

Mrs. Elizabeth Henderson, 60, of Welland, Ontario.

Sheriff Orville E. Johnson opened an investigation immediately. Hills and curves block the view at each end of the bridge.

Two persons were brought to a Huntington hospital with serious injuries. They were Sam Weiner, of Toledo, and Lucien Harris, 35, colored, of Newbern, Tenn.

Other injured included Mrs. Melvin Bryant, mother of the infant killed. Mrs. Bryant's left arm was broken and her hand mangled.

Several persons on the bus were treated by physicians and released.

The bus was operated by the A. B. C. Bus Co. and was driven by Byron Hall, of Fort Wayne. The transport, used for carrying automobiles, was driven by Charles Mill, of Fremont, Ind. It is the property of the Evans Transport Co. of Indianapolis.

Both drivers escaped injury.

The two heavy vehicles sideswiped on the bride and remained tangled on the road, a steel bannister of the bridge keeping them from toppling into a creek bed 15 or 20 feet below.

Three Boy Coasters Killed.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 8 (U.P.).—Three boys riding sleds behind an automobile were killed tonight when another car slid into them on an icy highway.

The dead: Willard Runkel, 12; Edward Ward, 12; Robert Gunlach, 13.

Seven boys were riding on five sleds behind a car driven by Don Carey when they were struck by the auto of Robert Moran, of Deforest.

Hauptmann

the nursery the night of the kidnaping.

He said all the exhibits in his possession, and probably the kidnap ladder, which he does not have, will be placed before the pardons court.

"My sole interest is to see that justice is done," the Governor said. "If Hauptmann is guilty, the nature of the crime warrants the full penalty of the law. If he is not guilty or the judges are convinced of any element of doubt, they should give consideration to that. If there were accomplices, every agency of the State should be used in an effort to punish all involved in the crime."

Chapman Precedent.

New York, Jan. 8 (A.P.).—If Bruno Richard Hauptmann is permitted to plead his own case before the New Jersey Board of Pardons next Saturday, it will afford something of a parallel with the final moments in the life of Gerald Chapman, the robber-killer.

A few hours before he was hanged for the slaying of a New Britain, Conn., policeman, Chapman stood before the Connecticut Pardon Board and asked clemency.

It was in the Wethersfield Prison. Members of the board filed solemnly in and sat in silence as the mail bandit-prison breaker-killer bitterly excoriated the State for "railroading" him to the gallows.

He reiterated his claim that his constitutional rights were disregarded in bringing him back to Connecticut instead of sending him back to the Federal Prison at Atlanta from which he had escaped.

Chapman showed surprising knowledge of law. The Connecticut law provided that appeals for clemency should be made only by the condemned men and so Chapman appeared without counsel.

The plea was denied and on April 6, 1926, Chapman was hanged. The execution that day echoed for weeks in the public consciousness. The green rope stretched—as much as nine inches, witnesses said. Instead of dying instantaneously, Chapman strangled. It was 9 minutes before he was pronounced dead.

Hauptmann lacks Chapman's quick tongue. The story he has to tell, he insists, is the same he has told repeatedly, without change. Handicapped by a clumsy knowledge of the English language, he could scarcely hope to be as eloquent as Chapman.

There was no indication today that he would be permitted to speak.

Taxi Driver Identifies Prisoner as Assailant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 8.—W. Sherman Leighty, Hancock taxicab operator, has identified Edgar Rudy, 24, of this city, as the bandit who attacked and robbed him in his home at Hancock Tuesday night. Rudy was arrested as he stepped from a Western Maryland railroad train here yesterday, and also was identified by Constable Charles Barnhart, of Hancock, as the man he pursued and battled with until he was tossed over a cliff.

Barnhart made the identification at the hospital, where he is confined with a fractured ankle and other injuries, while Leighty confronted Rudy at the jail and named him as the man who came to his home, struck him on the head with the butt of a revolver and stole $14. Rudy will be given a hearing tomorrow afternoon at Hancock.

A fire, believed to have started from sparks left by roof soldering machines, bit into the roof of a $150,000 home being built at Tracy place and Belmont road northwest for Eugene C. Coulter, retired educator, last night. Prominent society members saw the two-alarm battle by firemen.

Father to Plead Today to Save Son From Chair

Maj. Raymond in New York to Beg Clemency for Doomed Namesake.

Frantic eleventh-hour efforts to save his 21-year-old son from the electric chair will be made in New York today by Maj. Newman Raymond, Alexandria builder.

Newman Raymond, jr., and three young companions are due to "walk the last mile" tonight at Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y., in the killing of a policeman a year ago.

Nelson Clark, 83, so-called "modern Fagin," who planned the luggage store holdup in which James Killion, young patrolman, was slain, yesterday wrote Gov. Herbert Lehman and asked clemency for Raymond and the trio convicted with him—Ray Orley, 21; Amerigo Angelini, 20, and Thomas Gilbride, 20.

Clark, now serving a 10 to 20 year sentence in Sing Sing for his part in the crime, informed the Governor the youths slated to die "acted under the stress of temperamental confusion."

"Life," he added, "is the most cherished of all human possessions and, as my time is almost over, I can only plead that your excellency do what is possible to give these boys a chance to think over their deed and perhaps ultimately return to society."

The elder Raymond, once an evangelist and a former Virginia senatorial candidate, already has made one personal appeal to the Governor and may attempt to see Lehman again today if necessary.

His son, Maj. Raymond explained, accompanied the other youths to the holdup scene as "a lark" after they asked him if he wished to go with them "on a little job."

Maj. Raymond told reporters it was "ridiculous" to charge his son with first-degree murder when he did not kill the policeman.

Tracy Place Blaze Menaces Incompleted $150,000 Home

A fashionable crowd watched last night while a $20,000 blaze ate away the roof of the four-story Georgian brick home of Eugene C. Coulter, retired educator, is building for himself atop Rock Creek Park canyon.

Two alarms were turned in. The first was telephoned by the wife of the junior Senator from Maine, Mrs. Wallace H. White, who first glimpsed leaping flames on the top (fourth) floor attic from her home across the street, 2449 Tracy place northwest.

Roaring down the mansion-lined streets to Tracy place and Belmont road came the Sixth, Ninth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third and Forty-first engine companies and the First Rescue Squad. Hoses, pouring 750 gallons of water a minute, flooded the top story.

It took until 7 p. m., nearly a half hour, to halt the fire, while the Washington Social Register poured its names into the neighboring streets.

Among those present were the Austrian Minister and Mrs. Edgar G. L. Prochnik; the Polish Charge d'Affaires, Wladyslaw Sokolowski; Senator and Mrs. White; Representative Allen H. Treadway, of Massachusetts; Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of Washington Cathedral; Keith Merrill, executive assistant to the Secretary of State; Mrs. Frank Ridgely and Mrs. James Edward Jones.

Coulter, former head of the University School in Chicago, and father of Eliot B. Coulter, assistant chief of the State Department's visa section, ordered construction of the $150,000 mansion by the W. P. Lipscomb Building Co. eight months ago. It has nearly been completed.

Even as the firemen worked, a gas furnace and air conditioning plant were in operation. Coulter now lives at the Wardman Park Hotel.

School Bus Crash Suits Are Filed After Ruling

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 8.—Eighteen suits asking $400,000 damages recently filed in Washington County by relatives of children killed and injured last spring in the Rockville school bus crash were filed with the clerk of the court here today. The cases were transferred to the local court from the Washington County Circuit Court last month.

Howard R. Poe, owner of the bus, and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad are named defendants in each suit.

Illness Avoided 80 Years.

Windsor, Ont. (U.P.).—Joseph St. Louis, father of 14 children, boasted on his eightieth birthday that he has never been sick or tasted medicine, never has attended a theater and has never gambled.

Trapper Is Fined $25 For Using Poison Gas

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 8.—A trapper who uses gas instead of more familiar methods was fined $25 and costs in trial justice court yesterday. He is E. T. Eakle, of Fort Defiance. He was charged by Game Warden H. I. Todd with trapping with an unlawful device.

As evidence, a small metallic tube was laid gingerly on Justice W. Terrell Sheehan's desk. Filled with poisonous gas, the metal container, easily punctured, is calculated to bring death to any animal forced to remain in close contact with the fumes. Court and game officials said it was the first time they had ever heard of the device being used.

State May File Criminal Action In Hewitt Case

Prosecutor to Lay Sterilization of Girl Before the Grand Jury.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Calif., Jan. 8.—Criminal action against Mrs. Maryon Cooper-Hewitt, who faces a $500,000 damage suit for having her daughter sterilized, was indicated tonight.

Assistant District Attorney August Fourtner said he believed the operation was illegal and thereby constituted mayhem. His statement was followed by the announcement of District Attorney Matthew Brady that the case would be laid before the county grand jury.

In the civil suit, Ann Cooper Hewitt, 21, asserts that her mother and three other persons forced the sterilization operation to gain control of a $2,000,000 estate.

The prosecutors pointed out that the operation was performed when Ann was a minor. Under State laws a minor must be adjudged to be an idiot, and the written consent of parents or guardian must be given before sterilization can be done.

Mother Requested Operation.

Ann was operated upon at the request of her mother, a glittering figure in American and European society. The doctors who advised and performed the operation, Dr. Tilton Tillman and Dr. Samuel Boyd, said Ann first had been classed as "feeble minded" following tests by Mrs. Mary Scally, State psychiatrist. Tillman, Boyd and Mrs. Scally were named in the $500,000 suit.

"If the fate of all the future mothers depended on answering correctly questions propounded by psychologists there would be such a long line of girls waiting to be sterilized that the surgeons would never get caught up with their work," said Russell P. Tyler, Ann's attorney.

Both Tyler and Ann denied the "feeble-mindedness" charge. Three nurses who attended the "forgotten heiress" at the time of the operation likewise insisted in affidavits that she was normal, and that her mother never had manifested any true affection toward her daughter.

Grace Wilkin, one of the nurses, made further startling charges in the case today. Last night she declared she had received a letter, purportedly from Mrs. Cooper-Hewitt, warning her not to testify in the case.

Jubilant at $9,000 Allowance.

"Mrs. Cooper-Hwitt had asked $15,000 to pay for the operation from the trust fund left by her husband," Miss Wilkin said today. "When she was informed that $9,000 had been allowed she was jubilant. She said:

"'Now that the covered wagon is in we'll go out and celebrate.'

"I've heard her say: 'I don't want Ann to get that money from the estate. She's a moron. I want that money myself.'

"Ann was kept an asolute prisoner on the second floor of the apartment they occupied. Whenever she tried to argue with her mother the latter would fly into a perfect tantrum. Mrs. Cooper-Hewitt never would sleep alone.

"Ann was a bright child, but I wouldn't have blamed her for becoming a stark, raving maniac after the treatment she received. I know I would have been. I almost had a breakdown myself before I got off the case."

Change of Venu For Scottsboro Case Is Denied

Judge Rules Defendants Can Secure a Fair Trial at Decatur.

Decatur, Ala., Jan. 8 (A.P.).—The Negro defendants in the Scottsboro case lost their move for transfer of jurisdiction from State to Federal court today and the first of the new trials was set for January 20.

Charging the Negroes could not get a fair trial here, the defense based its petition on a section of the United States code providing for removal to Federal court "where equal civil rights" are denied the defendant or cannot be enforced in State courts.

Judge W. W. Callahan, presiding, overruled the motion after arguments by defense counsel. Osmond K. Fraenkel, of New York, and Clarence J. Watts, of Huntsville, Ala., who appeared for the Negroes, announced a new move for change of venue would be made.

The application was set for hearing January 16.

In the meantime, the defense lawyers said, an application may be filed direct with the United States district court to take jurisdiction in the case.

In his ruling, Judge Callahan said the statute cited by the defense holds only when it was shown that the State of Alabama by statute or by constitution had infringed the rights of the defendant.

The defense noted an exception to the ruling.

Immediately after overruling the motion, Judge Callahan set the trial of Haywood Patterson, one of the nine defendants in the case, for January 20. That of Clarence Norris, a second, was set for January 23.

The cases of two of the nine, all accused of attacking two white women, Mrs. Victoria Price and Ruby Bates, aboard a freight train in Jackson County in 1931, are being handled separately since the question has been raised that they were juveniles when the case originated.

Thief Steals Auto; Baby in Back Seat

The thief who stole an automobile from Seventeenth and F streets northwest yesterday made a mistake that has brought hours of anguish to a Washington mother and father.

The mistake he made was Junior, aged 2.

Junior was sitting in the back seat of the car. The thief slipped furtively behind the wheel, started the motor and drove away. Some time later, he saw Junior.

Junior's father, Claude L. King, colored, 1621 S street northwest, reported the car theft to police. But what he wanted, he said, was Junior.

Police said the thief no doubt was trying to figure out how in the world to get the boy back to King without getting himself in jail. They broadcast a lookout for the thief, automobile and Junior.

Selassie Rules Attack in Force Out of Warfare

Orders Tribes to Use Only Guerrilla Methods; Food Is Commandeered.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 8.—A sealed command from Emperor Haile Selassie to all his chieftains ordering them to refrain from attacking the enemy "in a body" was disclosed today.

The document ordered a continuation of guerrilla warfare and also outlined the procedure for collecting and transporting grains to troops.

A translation of the imperial document follows:

"The Lion of the Tribe of Judah hath conquered. Haile Selassie, first anointed of God, Emperor of Ethiopia, speaks:

"The whole world witnesses that our country, Ethiopia, through which streams of life flow, has lived depending solely on God's strength and attached to her faith.

"Foe Would Defile Faith."

"You see how all Ethiopians are prepared to shed their blood for independence and unity when an unjust enemy had come to trample under his feet our country, to impair our independence and to defile our faith. All this makes us very proud.

"Since the creation of the world and since the years began to be counted Ethiopia has never fallen into the hands of foreigners. We have full confidence that the God of our fathers will give us victory and preserve us from this unrighteous foreigner.

"Ethiopians! The present war can be won only by patience and science. Half of our weapons whereby we may attain victory consist in using various strategems patiently and without haste, in only harassing by sudden attacks in difficult places and in lengthening the time. It will mean destruction for our warriors if we should attempt to attack in a body the enemy who has been preparing arms for 40 years. We shall consider the means only whereby we can harm our enemy without injuring ourselves.

Method for Food Supply.

"In order that hunger may not strike and disband our troops who have gone forth into this war, all Ethiopians and owners of property shall help in the supply of food in the following manner:

"1. Those who have a harvest for every ten dawulas (a dawula is 200 pounds) shall help us with half a dawula of grain for the soldiers who have gone forth into the war.

"2. The regions beyond the Wayat and the Blue Nile shall pay taxes in accordance with the previous system. If, however, these taxes cannot be paid in time to meet the present needs, the amount of grain fixed in article 1 shall be collected after consultation with the local elders, who will decide as to the best means of bringing this about.

"3. You shall carry the grain you are supplying the army a distance of four days from your place and shall turn it over to the next provinces. You shall immediately return to your own home after delivering the grain.

Penalty for Disobedience.

"4. All wealthy persons who have grain and money are asked to lend me grain and money according to capacity and wish. There is no emergency more important than this one.

"Should you be stingy in lending us and should the enemy occupy the country by force it is certain that he will use the grain for the destruction of your brethren, who are fighting for your independence. You will repent irreparably.

"5. Should there be persons who desire to send food to their sons, brothers or relatives who have gone to war and have not the means to send it, we have established a special office known as the supply bureau which will receive such food against receipt and see that it reaches its destination. It is necessary to indicate in such cases the soldier's name, the place of warfare and the name of direct chief and commander-in-chief."

The covering letter from the Abuna said, "I have excommunicated all those who violate the above-mentioned commands and who fail to carry out the orders of the Emperor."

London Parley To End Friday, Delegates Fear

Japanese Parity Stand May Force an Early Adjournment.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 8.—A breakup of the five-power international naval conference Friday unless the Japanese make a last-minute about face in their demands for equality was seen as a possibility tonight in informed circles.

Great Britain's delegation, in an eleventh-hour move to prevent a crash of the conference, asked the Japanese to meet it privately tomorrow to discuss the serious turn of events. The conference itself is in recess until Friday.

Admiral Osami Nagano of the Japanese delegation, insisted at today's session that his demand for equality with the United States and Great Britain must be disposed of before anything else.

Thus, the conference was blocked in its consideration of French and Italian proposals for the exchange of mutual building information, through which it hoped to find a door leading to a limitation treaty replacing the Washington and naval pacts, expiring at the end of this year.

Unless Japan's demand for a fleet equal to the American and British ones, on a total tonnage basis, is granted, Admiral Nagano said, the Japanese will not discuss any other proposals.

There were strong but unconfirmed reports in naval circles that the British are about to approach the Americans, French and Italians on the question of continuing the conference upon a four-power basis if the Japanese walk out.

So far the Japanese have not delivered any sort of ultimatum and have not said what they will do if the conference persists Friday in a discussion of matters other than equality.

British proposals for the exchange of building information are scheduled for discussion then. If this subject is brought up regardless of the Japanese desires, some quarters felt the Orientals probably would say they had gone as far as they could and would have to ask Tokyo whether they should return home.

Experts pointed out the Japanese have left the door open for a possible change in their demands, but in informed Japanese quarters it was strongly indicated no change on the matter of equality can be expected.

Woman Dies on Filing Suit Predicting Death

Springfield, Ohio, Jan. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Martha E. Lookabaugh, 63, died today an hour after she had filed a damage suit in common pleas court in which she prophesied her own death.

In her suit, Mrs. Lookabaugh asked $35,000 from Mrs. Bertha Schreiber, of Springfield, for injuries resulting from an automobile collision January 4, 1935. She said she was hurt so severely that she never would recover and might die at any time.

Robinson and Wife Sued for $50,000

Charging he was injured seriously when an automobile operated by Mrs. Ewilda Robinson, wife of Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas and majority leader in the Senate, crashed into an automobile he was driving at Connecticut avenue and H street northwest in May, 1933, George T. Hall, jr., 316 A street northwest, yesterday in the District Supreme Court filed suit against them for $50,000.

Through Attorney William H. Collins, Hall claims he was thrown from his car in the collision and was caught beneath his own machine when it turned over. Injuries to his back, stomach and legs were recited by Hall, who claimed he is unable to bend his back or to walk normally.

Gen. Menocal Or Gomez Seen Choice in Cuba

Political Observers Think One of Them Will Be Named President.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Jan. 8.—Political observers agreed tonight that either Miguel Mariano Gomez, twice mayor of Havana, or Gen. Mario G. Menocal, twice President of Cuba, will be chosen president in the general elections scheduled Friday.

The third candidate, Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, provisional president after former President Gerardo Machado fled the island in 1933, made no campaign and was conceded little chance of success.

Gomez, most observers thought, was most likely to defeat Gen. Menocal. The former, who is head of the Accion Republicana, is supported by two other groups, while the latter's principal strength lies in his own party, the Menocalistas.

Some possibility that the elections might be postponed was raised as the supreme court studied a petition of "25 or more citizens" which asked suspension of elections and challenged the constitutionality of the electoral laws.

There are no real issues in the presidential contest, which is a battle of personalities. The nominees have no platforms and make no promises.

Two thousand soldiers were sent to the interior tonight to assure public order. All cafes and other places selling liquor will be closed during the voting period.

The interior department established facilities to check returns quickly and officials said they hoped to be able to announce the name of the new President about midnight Friday.

He will be inaugurated May 20, thereby ending 2½ years of provisional governments in Cuba.

50,000 Italian Troops Pushed To Africa Front

Mussolini Answers Plea of Field Commander for Additional Men.

By the United Press.

Rome, Jan. 8.—Premier Mussolini has dispatched more than 50,000 troops to Ethiopia in recent days in response to Marshal Pietro Badoglio's request for reinforcements, it was reported tonight.

It was admitted officially that Badoglio, commander in chief of the Fascist armies in East Africa, had reported need for additional troops, presumably to stem the Ethiopian offensive recently launched.

Units which have been ordered to East Africa include the Val Pusteria and Tevere divisions in addition to special corps which are sailing almost daily. The Val Pusteria division is composed of three regiments of Alpine troops and one regiment of Alpine artillery, formed from the units of nine regiments hitherto stationed on the French and Austrian frontiers.

Military observers believe the two-month lull in activities on the northern front will end with arrival of the Alpine division, probably around the end of January, before the rains.

The Alpine division may be the spearhead of a new offensive drive aimed at gaining limited but strategic positions, such as the Amba Alagi Ridge and the important natural line formed by the central section of Takkaze River and its eastern tributaries.

If these objectives are gained, the new front would approximate a sharp triangle, with the apex resting on the Amba Alagi Ridge, one base angle on the Takkaze River line and the other angle on the plateau overlooking the Danakil desert.

The drive is expected to involve an advance of between 15 and 30 miles.

Queen's Birthday Somber.

Rome, Jan. 8 (AP).—War cast its somber reflection today over the national celebration of the sixty-third birthday of Italy's "wartime queen."

Loyal subjects throughout the kingdom displayed flags and bunting. But, following the example of the queen, they held other celebrations to the sobriety required by the Ethiopian war and the League of Nations' economic siege.

She became Crown Princess of Italy in October, 1896, when her husband, now King Victor Emmanuel, was Prince of Piemonte.

The queen—thought of by Italians as the "wartime queen"—ascended the national throne with her husband in 1900, immediately after the assassination of King Humbert I.

Widow Free on Bond In Ax Attack on Sister

Mount Vernon, Ill., Jan. 8 (AP).—County authorities consented tonight to the release of Mrs. Ruth Laird, 34, on $3,000 bond after she reportedly had confessed attacking her 17-year-old sister with an ax after a dispute over attending church.

The girl, Margaret Cummins, high school senior, was recovering from a skull fracture which necessitated an operation for the removal of bone fragments.

Because she wanted to "ease her conscience," officers said Mrs. Laird, a widow, admitted the attack on her sister the night of December 28. They said the woman advised she would plead guilty when arraigned on a formal charge of assault with intent to murder.

Rep. Flannagan Assails Ruling Voiding AAA

Supreme Court, Liberty League Attacked in Nearby Speeches.

Attacks on the American Liberty League and criticism of the Supreme Court marked Jackson Day dinners of Democrats last night in nearby Maryland and Virginia counties and in the City of Alexandria.

Randolph Leigh, Democratic candiate for the Senate in Virginia, told the Young Democratic Club in Herndon, Va., the Supreme Court, in several recent decisions, "usurped" power intended to be exercised by the legislative and executive branches of the Government.

He said it would be "easy to enlarge the size of the court," while a constitutional amendment to head off decisions such as those dealing with the AAA and NRA could only be adopted through "burdensome" procedure.

In the past, Leigh pointed out, the court was enlarged from five to seven and then to nine members.

Cites Alternatives.

He summed up his attitude in these words:

"It simply narrows down to a matter of whether the ultimate power of our Government (long a question in dispute) is to be lodged in a living President and his colleagues in Congress as chosen by the voters, or in the appointees of dead Presidents, for two-thirds of the members of the present court were appointed by Presidents now already ten years in their graves."

Representative John W. Flannagan, another speaker at the Herndon dinner, assailed the Liberty League as composed of "vultures and pilferers of the American people."

Defends Spending.

He defended New Deal expenditures as "a cheap price to pay to get rid of Herbert Hoover and the things he stood for in government."

Charles Pickett, toastmaster, presented an engraved scroll to F. W. (Tudie) Richardson, who recently retired after 5 years as Fairfax County clerk. President Roosevelt was among those who signed the scroll.

The Liberty League and the United States Chamber of Commerce were accused of attempting to "wreck" the Roosevelt Administration by Representative William D. McFarlane, Texas, at a dinner in the Washington Golf and Country Club, sponsored by the Arlington County Democratic executive committee.

Criticizes Decision.

McFarlane criticized the Supreme Court's AAA decision on the grounds that the Constitution did not empower the court to invalidate acts of Congress.

John J. Wicker, Virginia director of the HOLC, predicted "four more years of progress" under Roosevelt.

Representative James M. Mead, New York, likened Roosevelt to Andrew Jackson as "the representative of the common people" at a dinner of the United Young Men's Democratic Club of Montgomery County in the Kenwood Country Club.

He warned against any change in the American form of government and declared this country is the only nation in the world which can change an administration without bloodshed.

Among other speakers were State Senator Stedman Prescott and Andrew Jackson (Cy) Cummings, Laurel race track president.

President Roosevelt's relief policies saved thousands of persons from starving in all parts of the country, Representative Byron N. Scott, California, told a dinner of the Alexandria Young Democratic Club in the George Mason Hotel. Leo P. Harlow presided.

Marylanders at the Jackson Day dinner in the Mayflower addressed by President Roosevelt included William Preston Lane, former State attorney general; Kent Mullikin, Speaker of the Maryland House of Representatives; Mr. and Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, Howard Bruce, national committeeman; William D. Byron, former assistant Attorney General of the United States; Mrs. William Stanley, Bennett Crain, Hampton Magruder, Howard Duckett, Benjamin C. Perry, Curtis Walker, Roger J. Whiteford, William Burroughs and John Stanley.

Text of President's Address at Jackson Day Dinner

The text of President Roosevelt's address at the Jackson Day dinner at the Mayflower last night follows:

Mr. Chairman, My Friends:

This meeting tonight, in the City of Washington, is one of many hundreds being held throughout our 48 States and territorial possessions, and even on board ships at sea, in honor of the memory of a great general and President, Andrew Jackson. To all of you I extend my most sincere and hearty greetings.

I am happy to stand here tonight and declare to you that the real issue before the United States is the right of the average man and woman to lead a finer, a better and a happier life. That was the same issue, more than 100 years ago, that confronted Andrew Jackson.

I speak tonight to this Democratic meeting in the same language as if I were addressing a Republican gathering, a Progressive gathering, an independent gathering, a gathering of businessmen or a gathering of workers or of farmers. There is nothing that I say here tonight that does not apply to every citizen in the country, not matter what his or her political affiliations may be.

It is true that we Americans have found party organizations to be useful, if not necessary, in the crystallization of opinion and in the demarcation of issues. It is true that I have received many honors at the hands of one of our great parties. It is nevertheless true that in the grave questions that confront the United States today I, as President of the United States, must, and will, consider our common problems first, foremost and pre-eminently from the American point of view.

To most of us, Andrew Jackson appropriately has become the symbol of certain great ideals. I like best to think of him as a man whom the average American deeply and fundamentally understood. To the masses of his countrymen his purposes and his character were an open book. They loved him well because they understood him well—his passion for justice, his championship of the cause of the exploited and the downtrodden, his ardent and flaming patriotism.

Jackson sought social justice and fought for human rights in his many battles to protect the people against autocratic or oligarchic aggression.

If at times his passionate devotion to this cause of the average citizen lent an amazing zeal to his thoughts, his speech and his actions, the people loved him for it all the more. They realized the intensity of the attacks by his enemies, by those who, thrust from power and position, pursued him with relentless hatred. The beneficiaries of the abuses to which he put an end pursued him with all the violence that political passions can generate. But the people of his day were not deceived. They loved him for the enemies he had made.

Backed not only by his party, but by thousands who had belonged to other parties or belonged to no party at all, Andrew Jackson was compelled to fight every inch for the ideals and policies of the Democratic republic in which he believed. An overwhelming proportion of the material power of the country was arrayed against him. The great media for the dissemination of information and the molding of public opinion fought him. Haughty and sterile intellectualism opposed him. Musty reaction disapproved him. Hollow and outworn traditionalism shook a trembling finger at him. It seemed that sometimes all were against him—all but the people of the United States.

Because history so often repeats itself, let me analyze further. Andrew Jackson stands out as a great American, not merely because he was two-fisted and fought for the people's rights, but because, through his career, he did as much as any man in our history to increase, on the part of the voters, knowledge of public problems and interest in their solution. Following the fundamentals of Jefferson he adhered to the broad philosophy that decisions made by the average of the voters would be more greatly enduring for, and helpful to, the Nation than decisions made by small segments of the electorate representing small or special classes endowed with great advantages of social or economic power.

He, like Jefferson, faced with the grave difficulty of disseminating facts to the electorate as a whole, was compelled to combat epithets, generalities, misrepresentation and the suppression of facts by the process of asking his supporters, and indeed all citizens, to constitute themselves into informal committees for the purpose of obtaining the facts and of spreading them abroad among their friends, their associates and their fellow workers.

I am aware that some wise-cracking columnist will probably say that good old Jackson no doubt realized that every red-blooded American citizen considered himself a committee of one anyway. Nevertheless, Jackson got his ideas and his ideals across, not through any luxurious propaganda, but because the man on the street and the man on the farm believed in his ideas, his ideals and his honesty, went out and dug up the facts and spread them abroad throughout the land.

History repeats—I am becoming dimly conscious of the fact that this year we are to have a national election. Sometimes at the close of a day I say to myself that the last national election must have been held a dozen years ago—so much water has run under the bridge, so many great events in our history have occurred since then. And yet 34 months, less than three years, have gone by since March, 1933.

History repeats — in these crowded months, as in the days of Jackson, two great achievements stand forth—the rebirth of the interest and understanding of a great citizenry in the problems of the nation and an established government which by positive action has proved its devotion to the recovery and well-being of that citizenry.

Whatever may be the platform, whoever may be the nominee of the Democratic Party—and I am told that a convention is to be held to decide these momentous questions—the basic issue will be the retention of popular government—an issue fraught once more with the difficult problem of disseminating facts and yet more facts, in the face of an opposition bent on hiding and distorting facts.

That is why organization, not party organization alone—important as that is—but an organization among all those, regardless of party, who believe in retaining progress and ideals, is so essential.

That is why, in addition to organization, I make this specific recommendation—that each and every one of you who are interested in obtaining the facts and in spreading those facts abroad, each and every one of you interested in getting at the truth that lies somewhere behind the smoke-screen of charges and counter-charges of a national campaign, constitute yourself a committee of one. To do this, you need no parchment certificate; to do this, you need no title. To do this, you need only your own conviction, your own intelligence and your own belief in the highest duty of the American citizen.

To act as such a committee of one you will need only your own appointment, an appointment which carries with it some effort, some obligation on your part to carry out the task you have assigned to yourself. You will have to run down statements made to you by others which you may believe to be false. You will need to analyze the motives of those who make assertions to you, to make an inventory in your own community, in order that you may check and re-check for yourself and thereby be in a position to answer those who have been misled or those who would mislead.

After my annual message to the Congress last Friday evening, I received many appreciative letters and telegrams from all over the country, and I think it will interest you to know that within a few hours I received more of these than at any time since the critical days of the spring of 1933. I have carefully read those letters and telegrams and found two facts which are worthy of repeating to you tonight. The first is that a very large number were sent to me by families who evidently heard my message while grouped together in the family home. "My wife and I want you to know how much we appreciate," etc.—for "the Jones family, gathered tonight with our friends, sends you this message of confidence." In other words, as greatly and perhaps even more greatly than on any other occasion since I have been in the White House, I have the definite feeling that what I have said about the great problems that face us as a Nation received a responsive, an appreciative and an understanding answer in the homes of America. This means a lot to me.

The other interesting fact about these letters and telegrams is the very great number of them that come from businessmen, store keepers, bankers and manufacturers. The gist of their messages to me is that they appreciate and are grateful for my statement that it is but a minority in business and finance that would "gang up" against the people's liberties. I reiterate that assertion tonight. By far the greater part of the businessmen, industrialists and other employers of the Nation seek no special advantage; they seek only an equal opportunity to share in the benefits and the obligations of government.

I am naturally grateful for this support and for the understanding on their part that the Government of the United States seeks to give them a square deal and a better deal—seeks to protect them and to save them from being plowed under by the small minority of businessmen and financiers, against whom I shall continue to wage war.

We can be thankful that people in all walks of life realize more and more that government is a living force in their lives. They understand that the value of their government depends on the interest which they display in it and the knowledge they have of its policies.

A government can be no better than the public opinion that sustains it.

I know you will not be surprised by lack of comment on my part tonight on the decision by the Supreme Court two days ago. I cannot render offhand judgment without studying, with the utmost care, two of the most momentous opinions ever rendered in a case before the Supreme Court of the United States. The ultimate results of the language of these opinions will profoundly affect the lives of Americans for years to come. It is enough to say that the attainment of justice and prosperity for American agriculture remains an immediate and constant objective of my Administration.

Just as Jackson roused the people to their fundamental duties as citizens, so must the leadership of this era do its utmost to encourage and sustain widespread interest in public affairs. There was something of the eternal youth in the spirit of Jackson. The destiny of youth became the destiny of America.

Tasks immediately before us are as arduous as the conquest of the frontier a hundred years ago. The Nation is still young, still growing, still conscious of its high destiny. Enthusiasm and the intelligence of the youth of the land are necessary to the fulfillment of that destiny.

As I understand the temper of the people, particularly the temper of youth, no party of reaction, no candidates of reaction can fulfill the hope and faith of that spirit. It is the sacred duty of us who are vested with the responsibility of leadership to justify the expectations of the young men and women of America.

We are at peace with the world; but the fight goes on. Our frontiers of today are economic, not geographic. Our enemies are the forces of privilege and greed within our own borders.

May a double portion of Old Hickory's spirit be upon us tonight. May we be inspired by the power and the glory and the justice of his rugged and fearless life.

Roosevelt

secondary in quality to that delivered by him Friday night, the President worked hard to draw chaars and applause from the 2,000 New Dealers jammed into the Mayflower Hotel ballroom.

Prepared to Cheer.

For the most part this audience was made up of Administration officials, employes, members of Congress and party leaders. They came prepared to cheer and when the huge Kleig lights were turned on and the President arose, they burst into a lusty ovation of applause, cheers and cow-boy yells which lasted several minutes.

Periodically this audience, many in white ties and tails—the women in the most fashionable gowns—set itself to applaud. But after the first few outbursts it was noticeable that the President had to exercise all the tricks of oratory—a change in the tone of his voice, an expression, a swaying of his head or a broad smile, with a toss of his head, to bring the applause to any volume.

Deviates From Text.

The President made significant deviations from his prepared text, extemporaneously adding words and phrases, here and there, in an effort to get a swing into what he was saying. He commenced by asserting that "on our menu cards is a medallion of a man who gave an immortal toast: 'The Federal Union, it must be preserved.'"

Those at the $50-a-plate dinner filled four large dining and ball rooms of the Mayflower Hotel during the serving of this meal. Most of the tables finally were removed from the large ballroom and chairs were placed in rows. Those who had dined in other rooms trooped in to get their first view of the President and party notabels.

There they found the President sitting with Postmaster General Farley on one hand and J. Bruce Kremer, former Democratic national committeeman from Montana, who was chairman of the committee on arrangements. Down the long table, on either side, sat the Cabinet, Democrats of House and Senate and officers of the party's national committee.

Smith, Davis Absent.

Absent, however, were such one-time party favorites as Alfred E. Smith, John W. Davis—who was in the city at another hotel—and James M. Cox, former Democratic Presidential candidates. Absent also was Maryland's former Governor, Albert C. Ritchie, Georgia's present Governor, Eugene Talmadge, who was in the city but hard the speech on the radio in his hotel room. But present was Senator Carter Glass, who frequently has assailed New Deal measures.

Soon the room became so smoke-filled that it was difficult to see from one end to the other of the hall. Under the strong kleig lights perspiration streamed down faces and onto white shirt fronts or stood out in beads in Democratic foreheads.

The President's voice was carried by radio to other Jackson Day dinners in all parts of the country, as well as to ships at sea. In Washington a $10-a-plate dinner was held by the Young Democrats at which Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of honor. Dinners in others cities were served at varying charges, each price including a contribution to the national committee.

President Only Speaker.

Mr. Roosevelt was the only speaker of the evening at the Mayflower Hotel meeting, Postmaster General Farley, who presided, saving his remarks to open the meeting of the Democratic National Committee today, called to select a date and meeting place for the party's national convention.

Philadelphia and Chicago are the chief contenders for the Democratic convention.

Despite the charge of $50 a plate, $45 of which went into the party war chests to pay its debts and provide funds for the campaign, the dinner was no Lucullian feast. The menu was no more elaborate than that of dinners held in hotels here every night in the week. Indeed, it was less elaborate because there were no wines or Corona cigars.

For a cocktail, a tomato stuffed with fresh lobster, crab flakes and shrimp was provided. The soup was diamond back terrapin seasoned with Madeira wine sauce. The main course consisted of breast of capon with Irish bacon southern style. The vegetables were broccoli polonaise and rice croquette with guava jelly.

Heart of romaine with hearts of palm, artichoke and alligator pear under a lorenzo dressing, served with a sandwich of graham bread and cheese, comprised the salad. The dessert was coupe of fresh strawberries with nougat ice cream and chantilly—just a strawberry sundae with whipped cream—and a pastry. Finally the demi-tasse and then Mr. Roosevelt.

The President commenced with the declaration that "the real issue before the United States is the right of the average man and woman to lead a finer, a better and a happier life"—an issue, which he said, confronted Andrew Jackson 100 years ago.

He said he was addressing his audience, scattered throughout the country, not as Democrats, but in the same language that he would speak to a Republican. Progressive or Independent gathering, a gathering of businessmen or a gathering of workers or farmers. What he had to say applied to every citizen, irrespective of political affiliation.

Eulogizes Jackson.

Mr. Roosevelt went on to eulogize Jackson, characterizing him as a man "whom the average American deeply and fundamentally understood," loved by his countrymen for "his passion for justice, his championship of the cause of the exploited and the downtrodden, his ardent and flaming patriotism."

"Jackson," asserted the President, "sought social justice and fought for human rights in his many battles to protect the people against autocratic or oligarchic aggression."

He recited the hatred toward Jackson held by those thrust from power and position by him, adding that the people of the country were not deceived—"they loved him for the enemies he had made," a remark which brought a storm of applause, as the Democratic diners sensed the parallel between Jackson and himself which the President inferentially was drawing.

Fought for Ideals.

Jackson, the President recalled, "was compelled to fight every inch for the ideals and policies of the democratic Republic in which he believed." He was fought by the great media for the dissemination of public opinion—"haughty and sterile intellectualism opposed him—"musty reaction disapproved him; hollow and outworn traditionalism shook a trembling finger at him."

In this vein Mr. Roosevelt went on with his eulogy of Jackson, painting him as the champion of the people's rights against small but strong interests representing special social and economic classes which sought to thwart him by denying to him means of disseminating the facts to the public.

Thus Jackson was compelled "to combat epithets, generalities, misrepresentations and the suppression of facts by asking his supporters and indeed all citizens to constitute themselves into informal committees for the purpose of obtaining the facts and of spreading them abroad among their friends, their associates and their fellow-workers."

Whatever may be the platform, whoever the nominee—and those were the things which he had been told the convention would decide—Mr. Roosevelt contended, "the basic issue will be the retention of popular government—an issue fraught once more with the difficult problem of disseminating facts and yet more facts, in the face of an opposition bent on hiding and distorting facts."

Calls on Each to Aid.

It was for that reason, he asserted, that he called on "each and every one of you who are interested in obtaining the facts and in spreading those facts abroad, each and every one interested in getting at the truth that lies somewhere behind the smoke screen of charges and counter-charges of a national campaign, to constitute yourself a committee of one" to run down false statements, find the truth and prevent misrepresentations.

2,300 Attend Party of Young Democrat Club

Crowd Overflows Willard Into Washington Hotel; First Lady Talks.

Democratic youth turned out last night to the number of 2,300 to tax the accommodations of the Willard Hotel in honor of Andrew Jackson and of their party.

The Jackson Day dinner of the Young Democratic Clubs of the District of Columbia for th ebenefit of the Democratic national committee, despite a $10-a-plate fee, grew to such proportions that it overflowed the six largest rooms in the Willard and had to run an annext in the Washington Hotel.

Nearly 1,500 jammed into the main ballroom of the Willard to listen to an ihformal speech by Mrs. Roosevelt, the flowery witticisms of Toastmaster Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, and to cheer the broadcast address of the President. Loud speakers carried the proceedings to the other rooms.

The sensation of the dinner was a little old lady with a black choke collar—Mrs. Florence Jackson Stoddard, historian and collateral descendant of President Jackson. She immediately won the hearts of the crowd with her gracious manner, drew cheer after cheer with her pointed references to the Supreme Court and then brought down the house with her own little poem, entitled "The Ballad of the Nine Old Men."

Senator Lewis was in his most gracious form. The only effect he showed of his critical illness in Russia last summer was the graying of his famous red beard. In introducing the First Lady, he said:

" . . . One who is the emblem of democracy; whose daily struggle is to rescue the oppressed—I present the American mother, the ideal of the Nation—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Mrs. Roosevelt, with charm and informality, stressed the importance of the place of woman in the life of the country, illustrating this with he rown experience.

"I did not fully understand Andrew Jackson," she said, "until I visited his home and learned about his wife and what good she had done in her own little community and in bringing to her husband a love of the people and of their country."

Introduced by Senator Lewis as "our eminent Comptroller of the Currency, the genial gentleman, the perfect orator," J. F. T. O'Connor reached the heights of poltical oratory with his description of the virtues of Jackson and a story about the American eagle.

Other speakers were John P. Bracken, president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, District of Columbia Division, Inc., and Frank Wickhem, national president, Young Democratic Clubs of America.

A ball followed the President's address.

Greetings from Chairman Farley of the Democratic national committee were read at a Jackson Day dinner held under auspices of the Colored National Democratic League last night at Crystal Caverns, with Charles M. Thomas as toastmaster.

Three Will Get Prince Georges Pension Checks

Age Benefit Payments to Start Jan. 15; 9 Cases Before Board.

Payment of old-age pensions in Prince Georges County will begin January 15 with a list of three benefactors, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. J. Enos Ray, chairman of the county welfare board.

Mrs. Ray said that investigation of nine other cases has been completed and the names will be presented for approval when the board holds its regular meeting next Monday.

"The reduction in personnel in the office at Hyattsville has hampered the investigation of pension applicants, but 75 applications are under investigation and will be certified for pension if found eligible," she pointed out.

There are 35 applications now on file.

Listing the restrictions and rules governing the payment of old-age pensions, the welfare chairman said:

"Persons must be over 65 years of age and a resident of the State of Maryland for five of the last ten years, and of this county one year prior to the application.

"In addition, those who are granted pensions who may have small property holdings must be willing to sign a lien to the county commissioners to cover the public expense involved."

Construction of the proposed "Lohrs Hill cut-off" on the Southern Maryland pike at the District line appeared assured yesterday, after a conference in Baltimore between State road officials and citizens of southern Maryland.

Joseph H. Blanford, Prince Georges County commissioner and member of the delegation, said the State road commissioners "appeared anxious to build" the road that will eliminate five "death curves."

Officially, however, Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the commission, said he was unable to give any definite answer to the request. He said a study must be made of the proposal.

Besides Blanford, the delegation, representing the Southern Maryland Citizens Association, consisted of Frank Reh, jr., and Harry F. Bradley, of Clinton, and James Wills, of La Plata.

They pointed out that with the expenditure of about $25,000 a stretch of road which costs several lives each year could be abandoned. The proposed section would be about 900 yards long and would connect Branch avenue southeast.

Members of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners will meet with the Maryland State roads commission in Baltimore next Monday at 11 a. m. to discuss the county's gas tax fund deficit.

With the county commissioners will go Kent R. Mullikin, of Laurel, Md., House of Delegates majority leader; Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate, and Hampton Magruder, internal revenue collector.

The meeting was called when the State commission served notice that maintenance of county roads would have to cease until the deficit—which now amounts to $45,000—is cleared.

Commissioner Joseph D. Blanford, who appeared hopeful about the situation last night, said that he "believed the situation can be straightened out without inconvenience to anyone."

E. C. Carman, of Cottage City, Md., has been named chairman of the new educational planning committee of the Prince Georges County Community Council, it was announced yesterday.

Other members of the committee are W. R. C. Comick, of Baden, Md.; Mrs. Hontas Sturgis, Hyattsville; Mrs. Joseph H. Blanford, Brandywine; Dr. H. F. Cotterman and Dr. R. C. Wiley, of the University of Maryland, and Mrs. C. V. Miller, of Seat Pleasant.

The committee has as its purpose better co-operation between county and local officials; betterment of school plant facilities; better courses of study; promotion of wider interest and knowledge of county history; discovery of outlets for county talent in music and art, and emphasizing the needs of 90 per cent of those who muse be prepared by county grade and high schools.

Further plans on the organization of a junior auxiliary to the American Legion Anxiliary of the Takoma Park Post, No. 28, where made at a meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. Frederick A. Burr.

Election of officers of the juniors will be held at meetting January 31 from 7 until 9 p. m. at the home of Mrs. E. Brooke Petty, 146 Carroll avenue. Mre. Paul Weinert, chairman of the junior department for Maryland, will install the officers at this time. The girls will tawe up either drill or bugle and drum corps work.

Alexander Robinson, 65, clerk in the Takoma Park, Md., police station, was taken to Sibley Hospital yesterday seriously ill. Robinson, who lives at 110 Baltimore avenue, Takoma Park, Md., has been suffering from a heart ailment for several weeks.

The date selected for the third annual charity ball of the Silver Spring Lions Club is February 20, at the Mayflower Hotel, it was announced yesterday by Arthur L. Blakeslee, chairman of the charity committee.

The committee assisting Mr. Blakeslee consists of Lowell Hendrick, vice chairman; Richard Barker, Walter B. Crossan, Harry L. King, Frank L. Hewitt, Truman M. Dodson, Edward C. Holmead, John C. Livingston, E. Francis McDevitt, James W. Gill, Kermit F. Smith, A. R. McCallum, F. Joseph Weber, Robert Copes, Tallman W. Peel, William A. Walsh and Raymond C. Williams.

Mrs. William Gertrude Castell, 49, of Takoma Park, Md., was granted a final decree of absolute divorce from Joseph Raymond Castell, of Washington, in the Montgomery County Circuit Court.

The testimony revealed the Castells were married in Washington and have three children, two of whom are over 21 years of age. Mrs. Castell, who charged cruelty, was awarded custody of the minor child.

Roy E. Hardy, of Clarksburg, Md., was awarded a final decree of absolute divorce from Ruth M. Hardy, of Washington. According to the testimony, they were married on September 3, 1931, and have one child. The plaintiff charged desertion. Custody of the child was awarded to the defendant, the plaintiff to be allowed to visit her at reasonable times.

Board to Push Reassessment For Arlington

Conference Will Seek Adoption of Act Tomorrow.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Awaiting the first meeting of the county board, at which policies will be adopted and affairs of the county considered, it was learned yesterday that the board will hold an informal conference tomorrow night to consider plans to seek adoption by the General Assembly of an act to provide for a special reassessment of real estate in Arlington County this year.

Chairman of the Board George M. Yeatman has stated that he is in favor of a reassessment this year. He believes it will provide a more equal assessment than now exists.

"Not only is it possible that it will produce far more revenue but the county's needs will be better provided for, and there is a possible chance of a reduction in taxes," Yeatman said.

With the county sharing in the profits of the sale of liquor by the State which also adds to the gross revenue of the county, it is learned that there is a movement to have that fund set aside with the road fund. Last year the county received more than $10,000.

Close co-operation between the county board and the Arlington County Civic Federation was assured when the newly elected members of the board met with the federation Tuesday night at Lyon Park.

County Manager Roy S. Braden stressed the importance of more interest in local government. The county manager informed the body that he was working on the county budget and would have it ready for submission to the board March 15.

Chance Buchanan, president of the federation, in response, urged the united support of the federation in all matters affecting the welfare of the county.

A resolution providing that money received from the A. B. C. Board from the sale of liquor in the State be set aside for school purposes was referred to the legislation and legal action committee for study and report.

Dr. Victor Meyers, chairman of the executive committee, announced the reappointment of Julian Simpson as secretary of the federation for another year.

George A. Collier was named chairman of a special committee to arrange for memorial services at the February meeting for members who have died during the last year.

Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, and John Lyon Post, No. 1350, Veterans of Foreign Wars, were enrolled as members of the federation on recommendation of Mrs. L. C. McNemar, chairman of the membership committee.

The regular monthly chest clinic for Arlington County will be held today at the Arlington Health Center from 10:30 a. m. to 1 p. m. The clinic will be conducted by Dr. H. A. Latane, of Alexandria. The clinic is open to both children and adults. In addition to the regular examination, children have the privilege of taking the tuberculin test.

"Travels Around the World" will be the subject of an address by W. W. Francis at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Robert E. Lee School at Leeway tonight at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Amy Reinhart will discuss library work.

Arlington Lodge, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, will meet tonight in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon. Newly elected officers will be installed.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Patrick Henry School at Arlington meets tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium.

State Will Start A Liquor Store At Fairfax, Va.

Site Is Not Yet Available; Recreation Committee to Meet Tonight.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 248, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of Virginia has decided to open a State liquor store in Fairfax, Va., provided a suitable site can be obtained, T. McCall Frazier, of the board, announced in Richmond yesterday.

At present no empty buildings are available.

The Rural Recreation Reserve Committee of Fairfax County will meet tonight at the county courthouse to receive reports on the county-wide drive for funds to begin construction work on the reserve. The land for the reserve has been donated by Mrs. James U. Kincheloe.

The Works Progress Administration originally offered to assist in establishing the reserve by furnishing the labor to erect the buildings and construct the roads. Leaders of the project declared yesterday that it is important to get the program started before the Federal funds become exhausted.

The Welfare Board of Fairfax County has appointed the Rev. Herbert A. Donovan, rector of Truro Episcopal Church, as its representative to co-operate with members of the county health department relative to establishing a children's detention home and maternity hospital. The committee is to investigate the probable cost of repair and the necessary alterations to the old county poorhouse, located on Little River pike about a mile west of Fairfax.

The dairying industry in Fairfax County has shown a marked improvement over past years, according to reports of the two county Herd Improvemnets Associations.

Ministers Pick Rev. McIlwaine To Head Body

Doll and Masterton Also Chosen by Group in Alexandria.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Rev. William B. McIlwaine, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, was re-elected president of the Alexandria Ministerial Association, at the annual meeting of that body yesterday in the Westminster Building.

Other officers chosen were the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, vice president, and the Rev. Robert C. Masterton, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, secretary-treasurer.

Monthly meetings will be held on the second Wednesday of each month at 10 a. m. The program for the February meeting will be in charge of the Rev. L. T. Greier, pastor of the Free Methodist Church.

A meeting of Robert E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, will be held at 8 p. m. today in Lee Camp Hall, when it will be decided whether to celebrate the birthday of Gen. Robert E. Lee January 19 with a banquet.

Robert E. Lee Camp, United Confederate Veterans, held this banquet annually, but last year after the death of the last Alexandria member of the camp, Gen. Edgar Warfield, only a small informal dinner was held at the George Mason Hotel, to honor the birthday of Lee and also as a tribute to Gen. Warfield.

John E. Martin, of Suffolk, president of the Virginia Education Association and superintendent of schools in Suffolk, will be the speaker at a meeting to be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the auditorium of the George Washington High School. The meeting is under the auspices of the Alexandria Teachers Association and Howard R. Richardson, chairman of the public relations committee of the group, is in charge of the program of entertainment.

Martin will talk on proposed legislation affecting teachers and schools to be presented at the forthcoming session of the Virginia Legislature. The public is invited.

Harry F. Kennedy, local chairman for the President's ball to be held in Alexandria January 30, has called a meeting of his committee for tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. Thirty per cent of the proceeds of this ball will go to the Warm Springs Foundation, Ga., and the remaining 70 per cent will be used for local treatment of infantile paralysis cases.

The Rev. William B. McIlwaine, official examiner for the Boy Scouts in bird study, announces that he will hold a short course in bird study each Tuesday and Thursday from 4 to 5 p. m. in the basement o fthe Westminster Building.

Mrs. Wayland C. Kidd, president of the Alexandria American Legion Auxiliary, will preside at the meeting to be held today at 8 p. m. in Gadsby's Tavern. An Americanism program will be offered, and members of Alexandria Post, No. 24, have been invited.

William Illch will be in charge of the program at the luncheon meeting of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club today at 12:30 p. m. in the George Mason Hotel. Harry F. Kennedy, president of the club, will preside.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Turmoil Seen As Townsend Pushes Plan

Move to Put Leaders 'On Spot' Aggravates Political Circles.

By the Associated Press.

Preparations of the Townsend organization to put Congressional leaders "on the spot" threatened last night to aggravate political turmoil over the prostrate AAA.

Dr. F. E. Townsend, sponsor of the $200-a-month pension proposal for persons over 60, disputed contentions that the Supreme Court decision Monday showed his plan was unconstitutional.

Although pessimisitic over the prospects of working through the major parties, his announced intention was to ascertain the views of the powers-that-be, if possible, before proceeding more definitely with third-party arrangements.

"Fed Up," He Says.

"People are fed up on the old party ideas," he reiterated, after hearing from his supporters across the country.

Democratic and Republican leaders were inclined to believe the sweeping away of AAA would affect the Townsend move in the farming areas. Questions affecting the farmers' income at once, it was suggested at the Capitol, would encourage alignments different from those over old-age pensions.

Members of the Senate and House in general awaited more definite signs of the way the wind was blowing before committing themselves. The recent claim of 39 votes in the House by the Townsent national weekly brought a rush of letters from some States.

Representative Hildebrandt (Democrat), South Dakota, protested today that his name had not been included. He had checked up sentiment in his district, and, "after careful consideration," decided to support the plan, he said.

Focht's Objection.

On the other hand, Representative Focht (Republican), Pennsylvania, objected to being listed in favor. He advocated old-age pensions, but said "I am afraid Dr. Townsend is overleaping the horse, and to commit myself before the plan is presented in definite form would be rank folly."

Another problem, as seen by Senator Cary (Republican), Wyoming, is how to meet the Supreme Court AAA decision where it said:

"A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the Constitution, signifies an exaction for support of the Government. The word has never been thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another."

Townsend headquarters denied published reports (not carried by the Associated Press) that an alliance had been formed with dry organizations. A spokesman said their ranks included both wets and drys.

Bremer Recounts Story of Kidnaping

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Jan. 8.—Edward G. Bremer told the story of his abduction and 22-day captivity to a Federal court jury for the second time today in the trial of three persons charged with conspiracy in the crime.

Last July his testimony was part of the Government case which led to conviction of five men, including Arthur (Doc) Barker, for parts in the plot.

Bremer wept on the stand this morning as he told how he was seized after taking his small daughter to school. He testified at the afternoon session that a condition of nervousness has persisted since he was freed after payment of $200,000 ransom. He was kidnaped January 17, 1934.

The banker stated he knew Harry Sawyer, one of the defendants, "well enough to say hello to him." Sawyer is charged with pointing out Bremer to the actual kidnapers. The other defendants are Cassius McDonald, Detroit engineer charged with exchanging $104,000 of the ransom money in Cuba, and William Weaver, indicted as one of the actual kidnapers.

Lunatic Is Found Bound and Taped

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Strange cries led Detective Harry States to the discovery today of a decrepit human, bound with rope, bed sheeting and tape.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Placa said the man was their son, Michael, 30 years old.

With a lengthy beard and long hair streaming down his back, Michael alternately groaned and shrieked. Beside him was a tin dipper and plate from which he was fed.

"He had been a patient at Pilgrim State Hospital until a year ago," the couple told States. "We found the trip too long so brought him home."

War Department Local, No. 261, National Federation of Federal Employes, celebrates its thirteenth anniversary with a party. The War employes marked the occasion to present $250 toward the national organization's merit defense fund. Photo shows, left to right—Miss Gertrude McNally, N. F. F. E. secretary-treasurer; W. E. Hoffheins, War Local secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Charles Bonneville, local officer; Joseph Stansfield, Interstate Commerce Commission, president of Interdepartmental Local, No. 2, and Miss Gertrude Coyle, president of War Local.

By Morgan Baker.

ENACTMENT of constructive personnel legislation in the present session of Congress faces a favorable outlook, it was indicated last night, following a meeting of the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations, a group which is said to represent more than 160,000 Federal employes in all branches of the service.

BAKER.

Holding their first meeting since the convening of Congress, the organization representatives reported that substantial progress already has been made in the preparation of legislation to be introduced.

Contacts on Capitol Hill reveal a strong sentiment in behalf of measures designed to improve conditions and boost efficiency in the Government service. Hearings on vital personnel measures now are being scheduled.

Two issues of profound importance to Government workers and to the service as a whole received chief attention at the meeting of the council.

"Bills sponsored by the council which have for their purpose the strengthening and extension of the merit system will be pushed to the utmost limit of the employe organizations' strength," John J. Barrett, chairman, declared.

"Members of the council have received assurance that these measures will receive the active support of many members of both the House and Senate. That there is a far greater volume of sentiment favorable to such legislation now than there was at the last session is certain. On every hand we find an increasing realization that something must be done to remedy the present chaotic situation due to the wholesale scrapping of the merit system, and to make impossible a recurrence of these conditions," Mr. Barrett emphasized.

Luther C. Steward, chairman of the council's legislative committee, reported that legislation will be introduced within the next few days providing for the liberalization of the retirement laws, including optional retirement after 30 years of service at a lower age, and extension of retirement benefits to a second life at lesser annuity.

Council-sponsored legislation also will be presented on other important personnel issues, among them classification, leave, bond premiums and sussistence regulations.

Dr. F. D. Richey, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, was recently elected vice president of the American Society of Agronomy, and Dr. Charles F. Swingle, of the same bureau, to the same office in the Botanical Society of Washington.

Postal Employe Elected.

Paul Vogenitz (P), Postoffice Department, has been elected president of the Federal Society of Translators, succeeding Burton H. Lamore, State. Other officers named at the January meeting include:

Kenneth F. Rogers, Postoffice, vice president; Miss Bluma Karp, Navy, recording secretary; Miss Ruth E. Ericson, Postoffice, corresponding secretary, and Henry P. Lewis, Insular Affairs, War, treasurer.

The society voted to send a gift to Mr. Lamore, who is recovering from an illness that has kept him confined at his home for about a month.

A forum, originally scheduled for January 6, has been postponed to February 3.

Dr. Joseph E. Alicata (P), Bureau of Animal Industry, has been appointed temporarily as parasitologist in the Hawaii Agricultural Experiment Station at Honolulu.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Leon Navara and his Hotel St. Moritz Orchestra and other acts; screen, Warner Baxter and Alice Faye in "King of Burlesque"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Ronald Colman, Donald Woods and Elizabeth Allen in "A Tale of Two Cities"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Will Rogers and Dorothy Wilson in "In Old Kentucky").

Appointment Confirmations.

Among the recess appointments sent to the Senate by President Roosevelt for confirmation were the following:

Clyde B. Aitchison, of Oregon, and Claude R. Porter, of Iowa, appointed to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Stewart McDonald, of Missouri, to succeed James A. Moffett as FHA administrator.

Joseph B. Keenan, of Ohio, as assistant to the Attorney General, and Brien McMahon, of Connecticut, to succeed Keenan as Assistant Attorney General.

John A. Tyson, of Mississippi, Board of Tax Appeals.

Edward Dana Durand, of Minnesota, tariff commissioner.

Culbertson on Bridge

A Vital Clew.

In most hands, the bidding, the opening lead, and subsequent fall of cards are vital clews at the service of a shrewd detective-declarer in his search for the correct line of play. The best of these clews often is of a negative nature—something on the type of "he couldn't have stolen the jewels because he was in jail at the time." Thus, the failure of a player to have made a bid sometimes may be correctly interpreted to mean that he did not hold a certain key card.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♥ Q 10 7
♦ K J 10
♣ J 10 6

WEST
♥ A K 4 3

♣ 7 5 4 2

EAST

♦ 9 8 7 4 3

SOUTH
♠ Q J 10 7 6 2

♣ A K Q

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 spade
Pass	2 no tr'p	Pass	3 spades
Pass	4 spades	Pass	Pass
Double (final bid)

West's consistent passing, up to his penalty double, was correct despite his three honor tricks. He had a miserable playing hand. His final double was, of course, a "stab."

West opened the heart king, and when he saw the dummy and his partner's discouraging three of hearts, underled the diamond ace. North played the king (to insure that East, if he held the ace, would disclose it then and there), and when it held the trick, the declarer had a perfect picture of the situation. West already had shown the ace and king of hearts and the ace of diamonds—and had passed first hand! Well, he might pass with three tricks and poor distribution, but that was the maximum—he could not have held the king of spades in addition. Declarer could not know that it was a singleton in East's hand, but he did know that West didn't have it and that a finesse, therefore, couldn't avail.

New York, Jan. 8.

MRS. BASIL DURANT'S daughter, Barbara Shields (she's Mrs. Gary Cooper's sister) is Mrs. James F. Crowley as the result of a secret wedding . . . He's on that a. m. tab . . . Papers missed the attempted kidnaping of Laura "Scandals" Shelvin . . . the thug already had the adhesive tape over her mouth when scared away . . . Joan Mitchell is wearing a diamond wrist watch from Jerry Cooper . . . Ben Platt, jr., and Jessica Pepper are on fire . . . Rita Rio is back with the N. T. G. show . . . Frances "Follies" Rand and Eddie Dowling, the stage manager, are feverish . . . Mary Alice Moore, in the same choir, prefers one of the Ben Yost warblers . . . Vernon Duke and Irene Kelly need ice packs . . . Ditto June Preisser and Don Lawrence, Bostonians . . . Mary Alice Rice, former Ziegfeld eyeful, takes over Helen Chandler's part in "Pride and Prejudice," a swell tribute to the youngster's determination to click as a dramatic actress . . . The autopsy on Dolores Dawn clears her of the drunkenness charges preferred against her . . . It shows 1 plus—and 3 plus is intoxication . . . Too bad the youngster didn't have greater resistance to the Stem hurdles . . . I know at least six chorines in New York who are desperately unhappy, but night after night they pocket their tears and put on the prop smiles that the audience expects, and the management demands . . . For instance, Harriett Hoctor, "Follies" ballerina, had to rush from Boston to Hoosick Falls, N. Y., to attend her dying father, and then rushed back for the next performance . . . He died while she was spell-binding a Hub audience.

• • • •

At Dan Healy's Broadway Room, yesterday morning at 3 o'clock, I saw the town's greatest tap dancer . . . Her name is Floria Vestoff, and she's been hoofing around here for years, but now she's suddenly acquired that certain something that spells greatness . . . She will be the new dancing sensation of the profession within the next six months . . . Best ventriloquist act that has bobbed up on the local scene in years, is a chap who calls himself Edgar Bergen . . . He's doubling from House of Morgan into the Roxy Theater, and smash-clicking with a ventriloquist routine that would put most of the big-time comics to shame . . . He has had the same dummy, Charlie, for 14 years, and I understand that Bergen worked his way through Northwestern University by doing his act at club affairs and Chicago parties . . . This Chicago-born newcomer and Miss Vestoff will be highlights of 1936.

• • • •

Within the next two weeks Broadway will be holding its ears to deafen itself to the shrill imitations of "The Music Goes 'Round" . . . The first one to reach print is a "Wahoo Wahoo" number, but it is too similar to the other to click . . . Lew Brown has written a parody on the daffy number for Sophie Tucker that is amusing, a recital of the troubles of a girl who has to diet . . . "If I gulp a small steak down, the small steak goes down and 'round and around" . . . Then pointing to her hips, Sophie wails: "And it comes out here" . . . I guess that Glenn Anders is the only ex-vaudeville performer who ever appeared in three Pulitzer Prize plays . . . And the only actor who holds that distinction . . . I've just been browsing through Burns Mantle's year books, and Anders appears in the 1925, 1926 and 1928 blue-ribbon winners . . . Mary Kirk Brown and Len Dushkind are hotter than the Miami sun

• • • •

Ella Logan, the town's newest "hot" singing phenom, goes into the Normandie tomorrow night. The little Scotch girl has finally landed in the high brackets . . . It could happen only in pictures . . . I mean what happens at the Roxy this week . . . There is a trailer advertising "The Invisible Ray," and after a closeup of Bela Lugosi, there appears a picture of Frank Lawton . . . A few seconds later, Sonnie Hale and Jessie Matthews are on the screen in their flicker . . . The coincidence is that Frank Lawton is married to Evelyn Laye, who divorced Sonny Hale because he wanted to marry Jessie Matthews . . . No other actor has the resonant speaking voice of Ronald Colman, which hops up the girls in "Tale of Two Cities" . . . Druscilla Strain wires an indignant denial from Chicago that she and C. Teagarden have reconciled . . . Jack Denny, whose band is one of the major enticements at French Casino, notes that "Rose of the Rancho" it at the Paramount, "So Red the Rose" at the State, and Billy Rose at the Hippodrome . . . In other words, a thorny Stem.

• • • •

A Cuban consul has won Flo Ardis from Willis George . . . The Charlie (M.-G.-M.) Salernos (she was Arlene Aber) celebrated their first anniversary two days ago . . . In a manner of speaking, they've pressed the valve down . . . Jack Ardis and Jerie O'Brien are talking preachers . . . . Young girl singer with the greatest 1936 prospects, I'd say, is Terry Lawlor, the distracting red-head at Leon and Eddie's . . . She is the prettiest of all the Stem canaries, and she knows how to sing a song, an unusual combination . . . Her mother was one of the better vaudeville warblers, and today the mother is so slim and pretty that the pair of them look like sisters . . . The mother sings across the street from Leon & Edie's, and between shows the youngster either goes to her mother's club or vice versa.

Faith In Neutrality?

The strategy of the Senate Munitions Committee in summoning the Morgan partners to the stand at this particular juncture is obvious. By emphasizing the important financing role which this firm played in the last war they expect to arouse sentiment for the rigid ban on loans and credits to belligerents contained in pending neutrality legislation. Given the prosecuting tactics of the Nye committee, which even seeks to deny witnesses the elementary right of making statements, this strategy is very likely to be successful.

The danger is that this success will in time produce a shattering reaction. By every device of unscrupulous propaganda the impression has been created that a handful of bankers and munition makers somehow coerced the United States into the last conflict. Accepting this ridiculous premise, it follows by simple logic that neutrality legislation which hamstrings these gentry in the event of future war will of itself keep the United States at peace. The intelligence of none of Mr. Nye's constituents is overtaxed by this reasoning. It is beautifully simple and psychologically effective. The fact that it is also absurd can be disregarded—for the present.

The gaudy show of the Munitions Committee is now revealing relatively little not already widely known and less which in any way refutes the abundant evidence that forces entirely beyond legislative control brought the United States into the last world war. But it is creating a tragic disposition to believe that Congress can actually solve an infinitely complex problem by the mere act of ordering neutrality. Seemingly not even the fate of the prohibition amendment has taught us, as a nation, that there are limits beyond which faith in the all-effective power of legislation becomes mere stupidity.

Rigid, mandatory neutrality legislation turns its back upon the constructive course of averting war through co-operative international action in favor of the naive belief that checks upon the profit-making motive can keep a great power out of all future conflicts. Regardless of what they say for public consumption, few members of Congress believe this in their hearts. Otherwise they could not consistently contemplate passage of the pending military appropriations, which approach the staggering and unprecedented sum of nearly one billion dollars.

Pending neutrality legislation amply eliminates bankers, munition makers and their ilk as possible contributors to future war psychology. Having achieved that end, it will be an instructive test of Congressional sincerity to see how many legislators think that, having ordained peace, we shall still need military appropriations far exceeding those of any other nation.

Maj. Berry Carries On.

The second industrial conference called by Maj. Berry which adjourned last Tuesday began auspiciously. The shouting and discord that characterized the meeting held last month were noticeably absent. In addition to 30 representatives of organized labor, 90 delegates appeared to present the viewpoint of employing industries. Many important trade associations also sent spokesmen to participate in the discussion.

Attendance at this second conference is a certain indication that the industries represented are genuinely desirous of working out some program of voluntary co-operation to regulate competitive practices and assure a better understanding with their employes. The fact that a number of powerful trade associations conspicuously absented themselves from the gathering serves to emphasize the fact that the participants were not present merely as a friendly gesture toward the Administration. They came because they realized that the demise of the NRA has left a number of unsolved problems which demand discussion.

Maj. Berry warned that "those who decline to discuss these problems must accept responsibility for their lack of interest in the principles of co-operation and good will." The representatives of labor have appointed committees to study such matters as the maximum work-week, anti-trust laws, and fair trade practices. Their views will be given publicity and doubtless forced upon Congressional attention. If the program of industry is framed without the assistance of the groups that have absented themselves from the conference, the latter cannot complain if Congress takes up legislation that fails to meet their particular requirements.

An Illustration At Hand.

Announcement is made that 315 young people are to be employed by the District Department of Playgrounds as a Youth Administration project. Here is an excellent opportunity to examine at first hand the customary effects of Federal projects on community programs of an indisputably local character.

In passing it may be observed that the Playground Department actually has been assigned 105 workers on one-third time, or the equivalent of 35 full-time employes. The official arithmetic which multiplies by three, when it should divide, is typical. For the local representatives of WPA throughout the country are under constant pressure from Federal or State headquarters to make a good paper showing, with none too much regard for the facts. Moreover, at the outset these untrained young people are more of a detriment than an asset to a public department, for even on playgrounds they must be trained by the professional staff before they are of any real use.

What is published, however, is that local playgrounds have received a generous subsidy in the form of many additional workers paid by the National Youth Administration. It is immediately argued that the local budget for playgrounds, or whatever the department may be, can therefore properly be cut. This is perhaps why the new District budget allows a greater increase for the care of the animals in the Zoo than for the care of the District children on playgrounds. The Zoo, to be exact, receives $225,000, or an increase of $10,000, for the care of some 2,300 animals. The Public Playground Department, which is supposed to serve 150,000 children, receives $194,300, or an increase of $3,500. We may now expect the same development in Washington that has happened in many other places. The regular service of the playgrounds will deteriorate because the Youth Administration recruits will inevitably disorganize a carefully planned local agency. Even if effective skilled help is secured the temporary improvement of a local program will lead to dissatisfaction when the Federal funds are discontinued and the local community is suddenly deprived of a social service to which it has become accustomed.

In short, the inevitable dislocation of local administration caused by the intrusion of haphazard Federal projects has become a definite menace to effective self-government. Carefully organized community undertakings are not merely hampered and disorganized but local initiative and sense of responsibility are also seriously weakened. This Federal aid can only be temporary, yet when it is withdrawn, the difficult period of readjustment will everywhere create deep dissatisfaction and violent demonstrations such as New York City has already witnessed. An exorbitant price is paid for the creation of a little casual employment which the local communities could develop much more scientifically if the system were one of grants to existing agencies rather than the mushroom development of new Federal bureaucracies.

The Informer.

The best picture of 1935, according to the New York Film Critics, was an adaptation of Liam O'Flaherty's "The Informer." Their decision was not concerned with its box-office appeal. In fact, few movie audiences would agree with them. The plot afforded little amusement or entertainment to those who look to the screen for surcease from their own troubles and tragedies. It was a striking and brave departure from the current avalanche of musical comedy films, G-men melodramas, and historical costume pictures.

The picture holds no brief for the issues involved in the struggle of the Irish Republicans against the Black and Tans. It reproduces no outstanding characters of that turbulent period. It points no moral and comes to no happy ending. It is simply the story of a hulking revolutionist who betrays his best friend for a sum of money and then pays the price with a guilty conscience and finally his life.

Victor McLaglen is the actor who brings Gypo Nolan to life against the flickering street lights of foggy Dublin, and John Ford is the director who succeeded in keeping the film sq free from typical Hollywood touches. It is an indictment against public taste rather than the film that its success was negligible. For it will be a long time before another picture will leave as vivid impressions as those of the street singer silhouetted against the falling rain; Gypo's foolhardy swaggering before his drunken friends; and the terrible but humorous trial of the informer by his old pals.

A Methodical Crusader.

On January 9, 1859, was born a little girl destined to become a leader in two great world movements—women's suffrage and peace. Growing up in an era of hoop-skirts and Victorian prejudices, she nevertheless set out at the age of 27 to earn her own living. She went about it quietly but with determination, a spirit which has marked all her varied activities.

Organization rather than emotionalism has ever been the watchword of this quiet, methodical crusader who, in 1930, received the Pictorial Review annual achievement award as "the American woman who has contributed most to the Nation's life in letters, art, science, philanthropy or social welfare." Today, at the age of 77, Carrie Chapman Catt still has her eyes trained on future attainments rather than contentedly enjoying the memories of her many past achievements.

It seems peculiarly appropriate, therefore, that the name of Mrs. Catt should head the list of those serving on the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War, which convenes in this city January 21. For this is an intelligent, far-sighted group of peace workers averse to the snare of short cuts and futile panaceas. It aims, through educating the public mind and conscience, to "build effective peace machinery, reduce war machinery, and obtain guaranteed security against war for every nation."

International peace will hardly come within the remainder of Mrs. Catt's life span. But if its attainment is ever to be realized, it will have to be along the lines of her reasoning. And that is a calm and rational study of the problems at hand quite as much as a passionate faith in the goal to be reached.

On Executive Planning.

In studying the President's budget message Congress is naturally distracted by the demolition of the AAA and the intrusion of the bonus. It would be a mistake to assume, however, that these are the only major perplexities unsolved by the message. The President's long-range budgetary planning and his theory of stimulating prosperity through governmental spending may also cause a few headaches.

Mr. Roosevelt congratulated the Legislature and himself upon the "consistent, broad national policy, adopted nearly three years ago," which, he said, "has thus far moved steadily, effectively, and successfully toward its objective." This policy, as now outlined, contemplated "a great increase in the annual expenditures of the Government" to aid recovery. It was predicated on the assumption that business and industrial activity would thus be increased, giving the Treasury more revenue and reducing the need for emergency expenditures, until the budget should be ultimately balanced.

In short, the President has informed Congress that they jointly planned the $10,800,000,000 deficit that will have been accumulated at the conclusion of his first three fiscal years in office. "There is today," he says, "no doubt of the fundamental soundness of the policy of 1933." Some short-sighted individuals had assumed each year that the Administration was making a sincere effort to balance the budget. Obviously they did not understand the inscrutable processes of Executive planning.

Current observations are the more difficult to swallow when the President's economy message to Congress is recalled. This appeal to put "our Government's house in order" is dated March 10, 1933, just about the time the "consistent broad" spending policy is now supposed to have been formulated. At that time Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that a deficit of approximately $5,000,000,000 had been piled up in four years—half the sum the present Administration has added to the national debt in three years. On this basis the President warned Congress that "for three long years the Federal Government has been on the road toward bankruptcy." Reversal of that policy was demanded, with the intimation that the credit of the United States was at stake, and that national recovery was dependent upon immediate retrenchment.

In response to the President's warning, and his reminder that "the members of Congress and I are pledged to immediate economy," both houses accepted a drastic measure reducing veterans' benefits and the salaries of Government employes. If the President had revealed his spending plan at that time, even gullible Congressmen could not have been expected to vote for these far-reaching cuts. Instead, the President said:

> I give you assurance that if this is done (meaning passage of the economy act) there is reasonable prospect that within a year the income of the Government will be sufficient to cover the expenditures of the Government.

Dr. Alexis Carrel says that in the near future it will be possible to suspend human animation. It's possible now—just give the guy a PWA job.

Who is Al Smith, that he should decline to be an overnight guest at the White House? Is he any better than Mrs. Roosevelt?

There's plenty of food for thought these days, if you know how to separate it from the balony.

Gov. Landon of Kansas drives a Model T. This isn't going back to horse and buggy days, but it's near enough to it to satisfy the most conservative person.

A scientist is confident that a study of cosmic rays will reveal the origin of the universe. Even so, it's too late to do anything about it.

Another Fantasy.

From the Newark Evening News.

Hardly less fantastic and certainly no more practical than the Townsend plan is the so-called welfare and unemployment insurance bill, which Senator Frazier announces he will sponsor. It would entail a Federal appropriation of $5,000,000,000 the first year. That and subsequent requirements would be met from taxation of "high incomes, corporate surpluses and accumulated wealth." It would be just as simple as that.

As chimerical as the scheme of financing are the scope of the benefits and the methods of dispensing them. Not only would payments be made for the whole period of unemployment, arising from any cause, which presumably includes old age, but they would equal the average wage for the beneficiary's occupation in the community. The plan would embrace those not eligible under the social security act, such as the self-employed farmer, "small" business owner and the professional worker.

The Post Impressionist

Father of A Genius.

Post Office, Thursday.

"WHAT about Liszt?" asks Otis R. Brown—who, though no relative of The Post's own Ray Brown, holds a brief for the musicians.

"Your interesting Column," his interesting letter continues, "has lately had something to say of the just past centennial of Mark Twain's birth and the soon-to-come centennial of the birth of Bret Harte. Those were good articles—but didn't you know that most of the musical world has lately celebrated the hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Franz Liszt?"

Our reply is affirmative.

One of our three Budapest readers warned the Column some while ago. The parliament of loyal Liszt's native Hungary would take what so many correspondents call "suitable action." On the great day, Liszt's "Coronation Mass" would be sung in Buda's Coronation Church. In the Royal Opera House, "a gala night of Liszt compositions" was to follow.

Oh, yes, we were conscious of the matter!

But we knew something more. We knew that there'd be plenty of time for us to write of the musical Abbe—because we knew that the celebrations were to continue far into the present year.

And we know why: July 31, 1936, will be the fiftieth anniversary of Liszt's death.

A memorial service will be held in the Basilica of St. Stephen, at Budapest. There will be a pilgrimage to Doborjan, where Liszt was born. The Treasury will issue commemorative coins. Throughout the national festival of St. Stephen's Week, in August, Liszt's music will be—well, theatrical folk would say "featured." Moreover——

But that's enough to show that we were aware of the birthday celebrations—and the deathday celebrations, too. So we'll get o: with Mr. Brown's letter:

"It would," he concludes, "be a grateful gesture if you wrote something about Liszt—about the scandal of the great Hungarian musician's childhood, for instance, and how he suffered at the hands of his tyrannical father."

There's a challenge we can't refuse. Too few people are at all aware of Adam Liszt; too many of them think he exploited Franz. Whereas, the fact is that Composer Franz owed as much to Adam as Poet Horace owed to his sire.

* * *

In the National Museum at Budapest you can see a portrait of Adam Liszt seated at a piano. He possessed musical talent of a high degree, desperately wanted to become a musician, had instead to earn his sadly scanty living as a hard worked and not too well treated bailiff for an estate of the Esterhazys at Doborjan. As soon as his son evinced a love for music, the father resolved to live entirely for the lad: cost what it might, Franz should succeed.

It cost everything.

In the first place, it cost the man the pain of inflicting pain on the boy. Unmistakably Franz had genius. Certainly the day would come when, had the genius not been disciplined, Franz would regret its consequent dissipation. But just now, just as surely, Franz didn't want the discipline.

So Adam had to impose it. Franz was always delicate, frequently ill. Yet he must practice for six hours a day. Only after that task was done might he improvise—for one hour.

"It is hard to be weary when young," said Adam; "but it is heart-breaking to be heart-hungry when old. I know—and I will save you."

Thus started the popular story—not yet ended—that the child Franz Liszt was the victim of a cruel parent.

The thing cost money, too.

Every influential person with whom Adam could speak he importuned to help Franz. He wrote to critics, besought the wealthy. When the boy had finally given, at the Esterhazys' Pozsony palace, a concert which won too soon forgotten promises of assistance, Adam took a desperate decision—gave up his job, sold everything he owned in the world and, conveying Franz to Vienna, starved there in order that Franz might have the best instruction.

Well, the experiment succeeded at last. The infant prodigy got engagements—which is to say that they were secured for him by his father. Enough was earned to live on—then more than enough. And, because Adam became the business manager of Franz, because the father would guard the son from every distraction—because Adam said "You must never suffer the failure I have suffered"—Adam was accused of heartlessly exploiting his own flesh and blood.

That's all there is to the abiding "scandal of the great Hungarian musician's childhood."

The Post-Impressionist indorses enthusiastically those commemorations of Franz. But we'd be pleased to have somebody, along about Father's Day, broadcast a word of praise for Adam.

Straw Votes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congress should lose no time passing the bill introduced by Representative Pierce, of Oregon, prohibiting the use of the mails for the taking of straw votes on the coming Presidential election. He rightly contends that straw ballots testing the national sentiment do not reflect the true sentiment of the people because it is an unfair question.

"Do you prefer the New Deal to the Old Deal?" is the real question—not all of its acts and policies. Millions of people, irrespective of political parties, do not approve all the acts and policies of the New Deal, while enthusiastically approving the major portion of them, resulting in greatly increased business and less unemployment.

The only class of people who do not approve any part of the New Deal are those of the plutocratic class, which put property rights over human rights, and have little use for a Republican of the Lincoln type or a Democrat of the Bryan-Roosevelt type.

Safety Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The annual report upon automobile deaths, just made public, states that over 35,000 persons were killed in automobile accidents during the past year. The District of Columbia's contribution to this delightful pastime was 116 taxpayers and such such.

Do people realize how many lives that represents? A city of 35,000 souls covers a pretty large tract of land. (This sum is in excess of the total populations of Alexandria and Fredericksburg.)

I am submitting a proposal I believe will, to some extent, alleviate the problem:

(1) Any person convicted of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor should be prohibited from ever again operating an automobile. (2) Any person found guilty of striking, bumping, or fatally injurying any person should be prohibited from ever again operating an auto.

Faced with disbarment for life the drivers would exercise more care in their driving. Pleas having failed, let us move forcefully, by law, and take these murderers off the highways and from behind those steering wheels!

Life's Driving Urge.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A correspondent, John J. O'Connor, in replying to C. L. Wright's clear-cut statement about birth control and morality, published in The Post December 28, says the latter "ignores the fact that the primary end of marriage is the begetting of children." Incidentally, this is what a modern philosopher has called God's great joke on man. A woman can bear children over a period covering about half of her marriagable years. What about the other half? The correspondent concludes that what is needed is not birth control but self-control.

Propagating is, of course, about all that comes of the union of the sexes on the lower planes of life. But on the higher planes it is a creative force from which not only children are born, but power. Fortunately, metaphysics gives us a broader and more beautiful explanation for life's greatest driving urge, and which in humans motivates marriage. That urge is to show us we cannot live alone. Life alone is not life, any more than electricity is electricity without two points of contact. Electricity is a force that needs to be directed. The same can be said of marriage, particularly in regard to its most potential and serious possibility, the bringing of new life into existence. CLARA LOUISE LESLIE.

From Diary Of Davis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following reference to President Andrew Jackson is found in the unpublished diary of my great-great-uncle, Andrew Jackson Davis, who, at the age of 21, visited Washington during December, 1835, and January, 1836:

"Dec. 18 . . . At 12 o'clock, in company with the Hon. H. Hubbard, I called on and was introduced to the President of the U. States. Found him smoking his pipe. He said that was a privilege he always claimed when he was talking, for he could smoke and talk at the same time but could not smoke and write at the same time."

League Lobby's "Sin."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have before me a beautiful 1936 calendar issued by the American Liberty League. It is issued as a "reminder that the Constitution is the safeguard and guaranty of this land of liberty and opportunity."

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington states that Senator Harrison, who is "close to the Administration," denounces this league as the "lobby league," made up of "apostles of greed." No doubt if Senator Harrison could have his way, there would be a death sentence on this or any other organization which dared to criticize the mess of unconstitutional legislation passed by Congress under the "must" edicts of President Roosevelt.

What does Senator Harrison mean by "lobby league"? If he knew his Constitution well, he would know that it guaranteed freedom of speech and of the press and of the "right of people to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." If it be lobbying to demand that the Congress shall faithfully observe the oath to "protect, preserve and defend the Constitution," and New Dealers consider it a sin to thus lobby for what they have themselves solemnly sworn to "protect, preserve and defend," then the league can proudly admit such lobby sin. In what way are members of the Liberty League "apostles of greed"? Is it greed to demand that we all enjoy liberty and opportunity? Or to desire retention of the ideals for which our ancestors of the Revolution fought and won? Is it greed to desire return of sound recovery, happy homes, general confidence, the return of men to work, and life necessities within purchasing reach of the masses? If so, such "greed" is sinless.

AAA Decision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Maybe it just isn't done in Washington, but anyway I'm going to express my gratitude to those six humane justices for the voiding of a law which has been so unkind to so many of us, in forcing us to pay such high prices for meat that we have had to do without it except as a rare treat.

If the politicians who conceived and passed this vicous law, or even those who encouraged it, had to give up meat as so many of us have had to do, they would never have passed it. But, of course, politicians never did care anything about the sufferings of poor people.

And we never could understand why we poor people should have to pay out money to farmers in high prices through the AAA, for they were at least better off than we city poor people, many of us out of work for so long. For the farmers never have given any money to us. But then we never could see, either, why the Government should give money to the farmers for doing nothing any more than they should give it to city workers for doing nothing. It is so cruelly unjust.

So I'm sure that the thoughts of many millions of despairing people must reach out in gratitude to those six merciful justices who were understanding enough to place human rights above politicians' rights.

NORMA PHELPS.
Washington, Jan. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here is a comment on the AAA which seems to hit the nail on the head.

I asked our laundress, who was raised and still lives on a farm, what she thought of the Supreme Court decision. She answered:

"Ise fo' it. It ain't right to kill pigs and plow under crops when folks is starvin', and den pay out good money to no-count folks fo' doin' nothin'."

She has a good grasp of the real situation. READER.
Washington, Jan. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following constitutional amendment would enable Congress to enact laws beyond the reach of any court. In effect:

That whenever both branches of Congress pass laws by a two-thirds vote in each branch such laws shall not be subject to interpretation by any Federal or State court. Congress now has the power to override the President by two-thirds majority—it should have the same power over the U. S. Supreme Court.

This would protect minorities by not permitting a mere majority of Congress to pass laws and would give the people, through their chosen Representatives, the power to enact emergency legislation. Otherwise we are not a free people, but are living in accordance with a Constitution written for colonial settlers. Here we are, modern people, with farmers six to one in favor of the AAA, and Congress, trying its best to restore prosperity, hamstrung by several aged lawyers sitting as supreme judges.

As a scion of pioneer settlers, it seems to me we have only two courses—either to amend the Constitution or declare a dictatorship. The conditions before us are both tragic and highly farcical.

Fair Enough

Paris, Jan. 8.

IT is your correspondent's hope to visit Albania yet, because Albania seems to be an interesting country and King Zog, if he deserves the reputation given him by travelers returned from Tirana, would justify the long journey. It was your correspondent's intention to go to Albania from Italy, but Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary and eurythmic skater, fell on his nose and broke it in three places while cutting an angel's wing on the ice in Switzerland, and then resigned.

This was something on the order of a crisis, so instead of proceeding to Albania your correspondent started for London, got as far along as Paris, learned of the appointment of beautiful Anthony Eden, the charm boy, and went no farther.

Travelers who have spent some time in Tirana, the capital of Albania, describe King Zog as a monarch of very democratic habits. They were sitting in a hotel room one night playing a few hands of poker when there came a bang on the door and a man in uniform walked in who looked as though he might be a policeman. They attempted to hide the cards and chips, but were resigned to 30 days in jail when the man in uniform introduced himself as King Zog's equerry and inquired: "What are you boys playing—bridge or poker? Because the King noticed your card game through his spyglass from the palace, and if it is bridge the house is pinched. But if it is poker he invites you to move over to the palace and deal him in."

IT further appears that His Majesty, Zog, is a very lonely man, thoroughly bored by the small circle of his court, unable to leave Albania for a few parties in Nice lest somebody ease him out of his job, as happened to Alfonso of Spain. He always is glad to receive visitors from other countries and to hear new jokes and gossip.

There is neither a railroad nor a bus line from Durazzo, the port, to Tirana, but it is possible to hire a private automobile, and the journey is said to be well worth while, as the court circle is very cordial.

His Majesty Zog is carried on the pay roll of the Italian government and, like Alfonso and the late Alexander of Yugoslavia, squirrels his wages away in gold in a safe deposit valut in Paris against the day when he might have to go away in great haste for the good of his health.

He is always worrying about his health, and for a long time his mother was the only one who was permitted to prepare his food. His majesty did not doubt the loyalty of his subjects, but he was leaving nothing to chance and since the death of his mother has employed an official guinea pig to sample all of his food before he will touch it himself.

This is a reasonable precaution, because Albania was Turkish until a little more than 20 years ago. Then it was captured by the Serbs and stolen from them by the Austrians, and finally became a free, independent monarchy subject to the supervision of Italy and Mussolini. All in all this makes for uncertainty, although officially King Zog's subjects are one big happy, loyal family.

• • • •

KING ZOG himself is the most democratic and informal monarch Europe has had since the happy days of King Nicholas of Montenegro, before the great war. Nicholas of Montenegro used to get so fed up with the monotony of life within the narrow confines of his little country that he would often go down to the railroad station to see the train come in and see who got off. He, too, was cordial to foreigners and used to decorate them at the drop of a hat.

But in after years, when he was living in Paris on an allowance from the French and Italian governments and his country was overrun by the German army, he did not give away actual decorations but only certificates which entitled recipients to buy their own insignia at a big jewelry store on the Rue de la Paix. Americans especially were fond of these decorations, which were set with expensive jewels, and the jeweler did a big business and kicked back a commission to his majesty King Nicholas, who always needed money.

Why he needed money is a mystery, because he had made good terms with the Italians when he sent his big, buxom daughter down there to marry King Victor Emmanuel at the time when the Italian royal family was producing too many runts and size was needed.

• • • •

THE accident to Sir Samuel Hoare's nose while he was cutting the angel's wing on skates in Switzerland has been treated with cynical levity and a brutal lack of human sympathy in Italy. His Excellency the late Foreign Secretary of His Majesty's government is really a very fancy eurythmic skater flits over the ice with the greatest of ease.

They were already sore because Sir Eric Drummond, the British Ambassador, went out to play golf the day of Anthony Eden's famous spat with Il Duce, and they said it was too bad His Excellency fell on his nose while flitting about with the greatest of ease in Switzerland. They were inclined to wish he had broken his neck, but they are a southern people with no appreciation of eurythmics on ice.

House Starts AAA Salvage

ize payment to all farmers who have applied for contracts and have made their acreage reductions, but have not had opportunity actually to execute the contracts.

Hope, influential in House farm councils, and a friend of Gov. Alf. Landon of Kansas, asserted his own belief that a direct subsidy to farmers, under one of the many domestic allotment variations, would be the best "emergency" method of meeting the present situation.

Bitterness engendered by the Supreme Court decision cropped out on the eve of the farm leaders' conference tomorrow in a fiery interchange of telegrams between Farm Administrator Chester C. Davis and Dan D. Casement, Kansas farmer and AAA critic.

Casement wired Davis that the "so-called leaders" summoned to Washington were chiefly responsible for the present "chaotic condition." He suggested the Farmers Independence Council of America, which shares the Supreme Court views, be represented at the conference.

Davis, fresh from the White House luncheon with the President and Secretary Wallace, swiftly read Casement out of Wallace's farmers' council.

Davis' telegram to Casement stated:

"Neither the so-called Farmers Independence Council of America, nor any other affiliates or representatives of the American Liberty League or of the big processor groups are invited to the agricultural conference here Friday and Saturday. This is a meeting of farmers and their representatives."

AAA officials charge Casement is a member of the American Liberty League and the Farmers Independence Council has occupied adjoining offices to the league.

New Control Likely.

Possibility that the House Agriculture Committee, asserting its new-found independence, might seek to attack the farm problem from the tangent of marketing control, rather than through direct production control outlawed by the Supreme Court, appeared likely as result of yesterday's inquiry ordered into licensing features of the AAA.

Existing AAA legislation, or that much of it left intact by the Supreme Court decision, permits licenses or "orders" to be issued by the Secretary, binding processors to comply with AAA marketing agreements.

Two plans are provided, one voluntary, the other imposed. Under the latter method, when two-thirds of the producers of a farm commodity vote for a marketing agreement, hearings are held and the Secretary issues an order setting forth terms, with which processors are expected to comply.

Powers Not Used.

These powers never have been broadly used, nor have they been altogether effective. There are now in effect marketing agreements and licenses, or licenses alone, covering some 28 fluid milk marketing areas, others covering the dry skim milk and evaporated milk industries, and some 12 fruit and vegetable industries. Under the amended AAA act, marketing agreements and orders have been applied to the California citrus and walnut industries. Hearings on new agreements and orders have been held by the AAA covering the Florida celery industry, the Colorado vegetable industry, the paper-shell pecan industry and the St. Louis and Boston milk-marketing areas.

Still casting about for a solution, pending tomorrow and Friday's conferences with farm leaders, Secretary Wallace said the AAA "is considering everything." One plan reported would combine the soil-conservation program with a domestic allotment plan.

Corn, cotton and other commodity loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation, amounting to $269,709,894, are not affected by the Supreme Court's AAA ruling, officials said.

Optimistic View.

An optimistic view of the Supreme Court's AAA invalidation was taken yesterday by a broad cross-section of processors and commodity dealers.

Robert M. Harriss, of Harriss & Vose, of New York, said in a statement here that the ruling "will eventually prove of benefit to the entire cotton trade." After the results are properly analyzed, he predicted, it will gradually bring about an increase in domestic consumption of at least 500,000 bales of cotton annually.

From Oakland, Calif., came announcement by Safeway Stores, Inc., operating 3,400 grocery stores, that it will pass on to customers any lower food costs resulting from the AAA decision, the Associated Press reported.

Dispatches from San Pedro, Calif., quoted Alden B. Swift, Chicago meat packer, as stating that "agriculture and industry should adjust themselves to the old order within the next six months, without mishap."

Price Decline Begins Here

called upon packers to cut the price of pork.

On several commodities, however, dealers had already stocked up with several weeks' supply, on which they had paid the processing taxes. No changes there can be expected for several weeks.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration controlled ten commodities—wheat, rye, corn, hogs, cotton, tobacco, rice, peanuts, sugar and potatoes. The picture on these, reported by leading distributors here yesterday, was this:

Wheat and rye—Wholesalers felt the price reduction on wheat flour yesterday. Bakers raised bread prices 0.5 cents a loaf here last September, but said that increase was due to increased costs of lard, milk, and other ingredients. Now, they say, increased operating costs induced by the social security act's taxes may counterbalance removal of AAA processing taxes.

Corn and hogs—Pork prices have risen sensationally in the last two years, even though recent consumption habits shifted away from pork and compelled intermittent reductions in price to try to win back the Nation's buyers. Loin, a high-priced cut, rose from 12 cents a pound two years ago to 23 cents now. Retailers are anxious for a cut by packers, the theoretical processing tax payers, as soon as possible.

Cotton.—NRA and AAA combined to raise cotton goods prices, with AAA hitting the low-grade cloths with increases of from 8 to 15 per cent. Prices remained unchanged after NRA fell, but now—"it's all up in the air."

Tobacco.—Processors were unable to pass on either the NRA or AAA costs to the consumer, and prices, hardly changed in three years, are not expected to change now.

Rice.—One wholesale house reported a reduction by refiners yesterday, balancing the processing tax-induced increase.

Peanuts.—No important change in price to consumers was recalled.

Sugar.—Prices fluctuated in accordance with supply and demand, and decreases now are expected.

Potatoes.—Potato control went into effect only last December 1, and has hardly been noticed, this being the off season.

World Picture A Gloomy One To Missioners

'Land-Grabbing' Scheme of Nations Deplored at M. E. Conference.

The picture of a world whose nations are set upon "commercial conquest" and "land-grabbing schemes" was painted in dark, foreboding colors by Dr. W. G. Cram, general secretary of the Southern Methodist Board of Missions, yesterday before 2,000 delegates to an annual mission conference here.

The missionary leader was one of the principal speakers at sessions in Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South. He described a recent trip around the world.

"The Kingdom of God has not come," he said. "Time was when the white man's civilization was almost if not altogether synonymous with Christianity. But today the totalitarian state has risen with Teutonic strength to make the Kingdom of God the object of its regulations and to drive the leaders of its church into exile.

Hits Colonizing Schemes.

"The great schemes of colonization that have been going on for a century or more among so-called backward nations cannot be designated as the 'Kingdom of God' movement. Some may inquire whether the missionaries and their properties and educational plans have not been protected by these powers, and whether the gunboats have not been our city of refuge, thus giving influence and standing to our agents.

"But, on the other hand, has not this rather identified us with the commercial conquests and the land-grabbing schemes and the forcing of concessions and the traffic in rum and the munitions of war, thus weakening our apostleship?

"The spiritual needs of the world are still crying in the dark. They voice an appeal for a new strategy in bringing the message of the imperishable Christ to the multitudes of the world's people."

Urges World Co-operation.

Dr. Frederick B. Fisher, pastor of Central Methodist Church, Detroit, last night told the delegates that Christian imperialism had served its day and that the important thing in the missionary enterprise today is to develop and co-operate in the national leadership in the church abroad.

"Let us encourage these rising churches abroad," he said, "and let our missionary agencies regard themselves merely as ambassadorial centers, and supporting centers for the free and living churches around the world without any desire to have long strings reaching across all the oceans of the world to control the details of missionary administration and policy."

Bishop John M. Moore, president of the board of missions, eulogized the religious leaders who founded the Methodist denomination. The value of their work, however, rests on the shoulders of their heirs, who carry on today, he said.

Bishop Freeman Speaks.

Bishop Paul B. Kern, chairman of the foreign work committee, and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, Episcopal Church, urged greater unity among the denominations in their missionary activity. Bishop Freeman called for a world-wide Christain unity. He lauded the world peace efforts of President Wilson.

Last night the delegates also heard Dr. Sao Ke Alfred Sze, Ambassador of China, in a talk extending greetings from his country.

A committee led by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of Charlotte, N. C., was received by President Roosevelt yesterday at the White House, presenting him with the antiwar resolutions adopted at the opening session of the conference.

The general theme of today's sessions will be "The Church in Town and Country." Speakers will include Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, presiding bishop of the Washington area. Methodist Episcopal Church; Bishop A. Frank Smith, of Houston, Tex.; Dr. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Washington; Bishop Mouzon and Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

Powerful Senate Group Pushes Neutrality Legislation

Morgan Bares Big Arms Deal

thing that could affect public opinion or otherwise. What of it?"

Just a Client, Says Morgan.

In answer to questions concerning alleged attempts by J. P. Morgan & Co. to influence British policy, Morgan replied:

"If you were agent for a gentleman and saw him getting into difficulties, wouldn't you show him the way out if you could? If the British antagonized everybody in this country they probably wouldn't be able to make more loans."

Raushenbush persistently questioned Morgan and Lamont concerning the meaning of cables passing between the Morgan office in London and the Morgan office in New York.

"You will find that when we are dealing with our partners we are not finessing," Morgan retored. "We say what we mean and we don't say what we don't mean. If it wasn't in the cables it wasn't there."

Raushenbush insisted the Morgan company was attempting to force Great Britain to buy rifles it did not want.

Acted Openly, Is Reply.

"We were acting with the greatest openness with the British Government," Morgan said. "We didn't ask them to do one thing and then make it something else. You can't do that with your good clients."

The controversy over the rifle contract was of long standing. At one time, testimony indicated, American arms manufacturers threatened a "strike" which would have halted the output of allied munitions in this country in 1916.

Much was made by Raushenbush of a draft of a cablegram written in the Morgan office in London, but never sent. The draft said that there was "growing feeling of irritation" in this country and interference with commerce and mails and cancelation of the rifle contract might add to that feeling. The draft was written in long hand, but neither Morgan nor Lamont recognized the handwriting.

"If this suggestion had been sent," Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, said, "I am unable to find anything but the implication that the attitude of the United States would be affected by war orders."

British "Blacklist" Recalled.

"The popular attitude would be," Morgan replied.

"Don't you think that would affect the official attitude?" Vandenberg asked.

"We adopted the traditional attitude of neutrality," Lamont said. "But the whole country was irritated by Breat Britain's blacklist activities, etc. All of us were."

Morgan objected to the evident theory of the committee that if American loans were shut off it would have meant disaster to Great Britain, even to the point of losing the war. He said that, of course, they would have had to rearrange their purchasing activities.

In answer to further questions, Morgan said:

"We were all in accord that the financial interest was the important thing.

"Maybe you thought we would deny that," he chuckled.

"We have here some pretty frank statements to the British government that if they didn't do what the bankers wanted the jig was up," Raushenbush said.

Britain Warned, They Say.

"We told them we believed there must be a composition of the rifle contracts," Lamont replied, to which Morgan added:

"We told them that if they wanted to go on over here they must satisfy the rifle manufacturers that they would deal fairly."

"Weren't you telling them," asked Raushenbush, "that unless they satisfied bankers and rifle manufacturers they couldn't contemplate with joy future relations over here?"

"There would have been difficulties making loans," Lamont replied.

"The fact that they took the rifles was evidence that they couldn't do anything else," Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, remarked. "In view of the financial situation, there was nothing else for them to do."

Evidence showed that the British had objected that the rifles did not meet specifications and that delivery was late.

Then, smiling broadly and with an occasional chuckle, Morgan told the committee how the rifle controversy finally was settled, with the British government virtually guaranteeing the American manufacturers against current losses.

Attended War Council.

"We (Morgan and Davison) attended a meeting of the British war council," he said. "It was the first time I ever saw a war council. We talked a little bit about the rifle contract and then talked about the war generally.

"Presently the prime minister (Lord Asquith) suggested that we come to his house. We went over there.

"The prime minister said, 'This has got to be settled, hasn't it?' I said, 'I hope it will be settled.'

"Then the prime minister said, 'You go out the back way, over to the treasury.'

"We went over to the treasury and found them there with the settlement."

Morgan did not say who he met at the treasury.

Assert Loans "Assured."

It was this settlement which the committee inferred insured future British loans in the United States.

Raushenbush suggested that the rifle contract was traded for loans.

"Isn't it true," Vandenberg asked, "that the rifle contract typifying war orders, had a commanding influence on American public policy? Wouldn't that make American public policy dependent on rifle contracts?"

"I don't think so," Lamont replied. "Every Administration is interested in the prosperity of the people. They don't give a hang about the prosperity of a group."

"When a rifle contract runs into neutrality, what then?" Vandenberg asked.

"We followed the neutrality policy as it existed then," Lamont said.

"I'm wondering," said Vandenberg, "if these industrial and fiscal problems would not affect out neutrality policy. It seems to me that neutrality and war contracts are pretty closely linked."

"The economic factor is always present," Lamont replied. "The American people gladly welcomed prosperity from war contracts."

Nye in Background.

Chairman Nye of the Munitions Committee took little part in the hearing. Nearly all the conversation was between Raushenbush and Lamont. Only once or twice during the morning session was Morgan asked a question.

Once, when a statement made by Morgan during the first day of the hearing was referred to Raushenbush asked:

"Did you write your personal statement yourself?"

"I certainly did," the banker replied. "I never make any personal statements unless I write them myself."

At another time, Morgan appeared to be almost dozing.

"Are we neglecting you, Mr. Morgan?" Raushenbush asked.

The Crowd Laughs.

Morgan appeared startled as the crowd laughed.

"No, I don't feel that in the least," he chuckled.

The crowd laughed again when he asked what the discussion a moment before had been about.

The audience awakened again for a little while during the drone of questions and answers when Lamont corrected a statement he had made the day before. He had said that during the war the Morgan partners were so busy that they worked "eight or ten hours a day."

"That was a slip of the tongue," he said. "I should have said 12 or 16 hours. My associates have been ragging me about it."

The Morgan company in its statement showing it had only a negligible interest in companies supplying munitions and materials during the war, added:

"Its injerest in munitions firms today is nonexistant."

Statement Read.

"Under its agreement with the British and French governments to act as their purchasing agents in the United States, J. P. Morgan & Co. made frequent reports to the British and French governments as to their holdings in companies which were given contracts for supplies for those two governments.

"Contracts were placed with nearly 900 firms in the United States. In only 14 of these companies did J. P. Morgan & Co., Drexel & Co., Morgan, Grenfell & Co., Morgan, Harjes & Co., or any of the partners of these firms, have any stock interest. In the majority of such cases the combined interest of these firms and their partners was a small fraction of 1 per cent of the total outstanding capital stock, the maximum interest being 3 per cent, with one exception where for a few months such holdings amounted to about 11 per cent of the outstanding stock of a company which during that period had orders of approximately $460,000 from the French government."

Got Small Share of Total.

The statement showed that of the $3,000,000,000 worth of goods purchased for the allies by the Morgan company before the United States entered the war, only $363,000,000 was spent with concerns in which the bank held stock.

Companies receiving war contracts and in which the Morgan partnership held stock in varying amounts were: American Can Co., Baldwin Locomotive Co., Cambria Steel Co., Case Threshing Machine Co., General Electric Co., International Harvester Co., Midvale Steel & Ordnance Co., Mississippi Valley Metal Products Co., National Carbon Co., Pennsylvania Steel Co., Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, Western Electric & Manufacturing Co., Washington Steel & Ordnance Co., U. S. Steel Products Co. (an affiliate of the United States Steel Corporation) and Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co.

In addition, from 1915 to 1919, inclusive, the statement showed that J. P. Morgan & Co. made short-time loans to 13 companies manufacturing munitions. The greatest amount of these loans at any one time, 1916-17, was $5,598,625. On April 6, 1917, when the United States entered the war, the loans totaled only $198,000.

Winchster Companies Involved.

Among the companies to which loans were made were the Winchester Arms-Union Metallic Cartridge Co., and the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., the concerns involved in the controversy over rifle contracts.

Loans also were made to some individuals connected with concerns manufacturing munitions. Included in this list were T. C. Du-Pont, Pierre S. Du Pont, Otis H. Cutler, chairman of the board of the American Brake Shoe and Foundry Co.; James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation; Stephen B. Fleming, director of the Butterworth Judson Corporation; Daniel G. Reid, chairman of the board of the American Can Co., and Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Government By Air Wave.

Uncle Sam is becoming Uncle Mike. Our Government has been wired for sound, the Ship of State is radio-controlled, and it is becoming harder and harder to tell whether we are living in a democracy or an eight-bulb set.

• • • •

We are engaged in a great static war to determine whether government of the radio fans by the radio fans and for the radio fans shall perish from the earth.

• • • •

When President Roosevelt delivered his address to Congress, not during a daytime session but to the unseen audience at 9 o'clock in the evening, it proved that government by ear has definitely arrived.

• • • •

It is only a question of time when the political conventions will have their platforms orchestrated for a jazz band, and when an inaugural address will be played by a philharmonic orchestra and explained by Prof. Damrosch.

• • • •

Within a short time a President won't take the oath of office without suitable radio stars on a guest program, or deliver his Independence or Thanksgiving Day proclamations until they have been set to music.

• • • •

There isn't a big advertiser in the country who wouldn't gladly finance the Democratic campaign this year for the privilege of having his pills, cigarettes, tooth paste or beer mentioned just once during each Presidential talk.

• • • •

"This is the Doople Shaving Cream hour, presenting the President of the United States and bringing you the budgetary proposals for the next six months over a national network, folks! Immediately after the Presidential address we will announce the winners in the $50,000 prize contest for the best essays on working up a satisfactory lather!"

• • • •

Were George Washington alive today he would probably have postponed his farewell address to his troops until a week after disbanding the Army if he found the radio arrangements at that time more satisfactory.

• • • •

Lincoln might have held up his freeing of the slaves until he had a suitable network, and shifted his Gettysburg speech to Vicksburg because of taller aerial towers.

• • • •

And our famous naval heroes, scorning to limit their remarks to the few sailors present, might have put off their memorable "Don't give up the ship!" "We have just begun to fight!" etc., until the next night when they could have reached a greater audience.

• • • •

It's an age of progress. And at both coming conventions we expect to hear yodelers.

War Promotion Charge Hurled At British Firm

Royal Commission Probes Vickers' Part in World Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 8.—Charges that foreign agents of the Vickers armament interests tried to "promote war" by urging countries to buy munitions climaxed a day of crossfire today between the Royal Commission on Private Manufacture of Arms and Britsh manufacturers.

Dame Rachel Crowdy, British social worker, who is a member of the royal commission, made the accusations after Commander Sir Charles Craven, managing director of Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd., and director of Vickers, Ltd., denied his agents had tried to boom foreign sales.

Dame Crowdy read a letter signed by Craven, which said:

U. S. Concern Mentioned.

Letters between Sir Charles and officials of the Electric Boat Co., of New London, Conn., which were introduced at munitions investigation in Washington by a Senate committee, also drew the attention of the British commission.

Sir Charles said they were not intended "to form a part of the official business records of either company," and declared the correspondence "was not couched in ordinary business language, but in colloquial language, such as is used when writing close personal friends."

At the Senate hearing it had been alleged Sir Charles, writing in regard to submarine contracts, said: "My friend at the admiralty will help us."

This revelation was one of the major factors in creation of the British royal commission, which reconvened today after a recess.

Says Diplomats Aided.

Sir Thomas Allen, a member of the commission, quoted Sir John Simon, former British foreign secretary and now home secretary, as saying the diplomatic service had assisted British armament firms in obtaining orders from abroad.

He asked Sir Charles if he was still getting diplomatic aid.

The munitions executive replied: "If we are not getting fair treatment we should, of course, make representations to the foreign office.

"I would not say that assistance has never been sought, but it would be rare."

Sir Herbert Lawrence, chairman of both Vickers, Ltd., and Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd., declared Sir Basil Zaharoff, whose name has figured prominently in the American inquiries, had not participated in the activities of the Vickers group since 1924 except that he had held an interest in a Spanish firm.

"A Sinister Figure."

Sir Philip Gibbs, novelist and member of the commission, however, asserted that in a letter which Zaharoff wrote in 1925 he mentioned "my firm of Vickers." Sir Philip said Zaharoff was popularly considered as "a very sinister figure, walking through the courts of Europe and acting as an agent for the sale of munitions of war."

Sir Herbert disclosed the development of an anti-aircraft gun which in competition with the world has proved its pre-eminence."

He added, however, that the British government, "if it wishes, can get full advantage of this development."

Sir Herbert hotly denied the Gibbs assertion that private armament firms "create a world danger," and that "from the nature of their business they are antagonistic toward peace."

Denies Part in Sino Ring.

A flat denial that Vickers, Ltd., was a member of "an international armaments ring" which has ramifications throughout the world was made by J. Reid Young, secretary and accountant of the company.

He asserted such a belief, "while no doubt sincerely held," is based on "complete misapprehension of the actual facts."

Young declared the company, its subsidiaries and its associates, do not control any foreign companies, but he admitted that its investments included 25 per cent of a Japanese ordnance and shipbuilding firm, 21 per cent and 22 per cent, respectively, of two Spanish armament companies, and 13¼ per cent of a Rumanian armament firm.

Sir Charles Craven said that the Vickers group "had no control of these companies in any way," and that "it is merely an investment."

Three Hostesses Hold First Cabinet at Homes

Mrs. Hull, Mrs. Morgenthau and Mrs. Dern Receive Members of Official, Diplomatic and Residential Society; Three Similar Functions Next Week.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The first of the series of Cabinet at-homes was held yesterday when Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, received from 4 until 6 o'clock.

Members of official, diplomatic and residential society went first to the Carlton Hotel where Mrs. Hull was receiving in the patio. She wore a gown of deep rose crepe embroidered with silver dots, and a shoulder bouquet of palest pink camillias. From the patio, the guests moved into a large reception room where a long tea table, decorated with a huge silver urn of pink roses, was presided over by a group of Congressional ladies.

The Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Florescu were there, the latter wearing a black coat trimmed with wide collar and cuffs of ermine, and a small black hat made entirely of aigrettes. They plan to leave next week for Florida before going to Mexico, where Mr. Florescu will be Counselor of the Rumanian Legation for several months before returning to Bucharest.

Also present was Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of Senator Copeland, wearing a black crepe and satin frock trimmed with clips of brilliants, and a small black hat. Mrs. Copeland has recently come to Washington for the season from her home at Suffern, N. Y., where she spent Christmas following a lengthy sojourn at her winter home in Florida.

Others glimpsed were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Merritte W. Ireland, Mrs. William McClellan Ritter, Mrs. Alben Barkley, wife of Senator Barkley, wearing deep red tweeds; Mrs. Sidney A. Taliaferro, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. John McClure, Mrs. Emerson Howe and Mrs. Robert Love Taylor.

Then on to the home of Mrs. Morgenthau on R street, where the hostess, wearing an afternoon gown of deep pansy blue, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Both wore black frocks with smart black hats.

In the dining room the table was decorated with a bowl of purple iris, yellow jonquils and snapdragons. Mrs. Lawrence W. Roberts, jr., wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, wearing a gown of black velvet with a hat of the same material turned up sharply on one side and a floating veil, and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, wearing a gown of taupe velvet, trimmed with bands of mink, and a small rolled-brim hat edged with the same fur, presided at tea and coffee urns.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the French Ambassador, arrived early, accompanied by pretty, blonde Mme. Saint, wife of the Third Secretary of the embassy, and Mme. Lucet, wife of the new attache of the embassy. Among others glimpsed there were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Justice Roberts; Mrs. Hugo L. Black, wife of Senator Black; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama, accompanied by Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Ecuador, and Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala; Mme. Petroff, wife of the Minister of Bulgaria, who will leave soon to return to Sofia, where the former will occupy a high position in the foreign office; Miss Elizabeth Howry, wearing a costume of deep gray; Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, in a suit of brown, trimmed with mink, and a wide-brimmed brown hat; Mrs. Wade H. Ellis in dark green; Mrs. John H. Russell, wife of the commandant of the Marine Corps; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Harold Walker and Miss Anne Squire.

At Highwood, home of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern, a great crowd was assembled. Uniformed aids made introductions and saw that everybody was comfortable and had a good time. Mrs. Dern received alone, wearing a gown of mahogany colored metallic lace, but the Secretary was on hand to greet his guests, most of whom were Army officers and their wives.

Bright fires burned on all the hearths, and a stringed orchestra played on the balcony above the entrance hall. Mrs. Harry Baxter, elder daughter of the Secretary and Mrs. Dern, was there, wearing a gown of black velvet with a bodice and long fitted sleeves of pale pink velvet, while Miss Betsy Dern wore a frock of deep tangerine colored crepe.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, wore a black coat trimmed with Persian lamb and a small, black hat. Nearby was Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, who was hurrying home to prepare for the musicale which she and the Ambassador gave last evening; Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., wife of Representative Fish; Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General, dashing off to the Jackson Day Dinner; Mrs. Ralph Worthington, and Miss Katherine Judge.

It was a most pleasant afternoon, and next Wednesday three more Cabinet hostesses will receive: Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy.

Daughters of 1812 To Hear Gewehr

American U. Professor to Discuss Ethiopia.

Dr. W. M. Gewehr, of American University, will make an address on Ethiopia at a social meeting and tea following the regular business meeting of the District of Columbia Society of the Daughters of 1812 at national headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island avenue, Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Iola Bucker, soprano, will sing a group of songs.

Welcoming the guests will be Mrs. Byron T. Gardner, Mrs. Clarence E. Curtis and Mrs. Florence Lancaster. Hostesses for the afternoon will be Mrs. Don I. Skidmore, Mrs. Samuel M. Meeks, Mrs. Herbert M. Chaney and Miss Evelyn L. Yeomans. Mrs. S. McDowell Meek is chairman of program, and Mrs. Lane Schofield is president of the society.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hostess at Teas; Hears Musicale

Entertains at White House; Attends Luncheon Given by Mrs. Wallace.

Mrs. Roosevelt attended the second of the series of Mrs. Townsend's Morning Musicales at the Mayflower yesterday morning, having as guests in her box Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, wife of Senator Robinson.

Later the First Lady attended the luncheon given in her honor by Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who entertained in her apartment at Wardman Park Hotel. The guests included Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. David Coker, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper; Mrs. Jay Tone, of Des Moines, and Miss Flora Dunlap, also of Des Moines.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at three teas in the White House. First, she received the Democratic national committeewomen and the wives of the Democratic committeemen, this group arriving at 3 o'clock for an informal talk before tea was served. Later a company of members of society who had called at the White House were received, and still later the First Lady received the women executives from the Justice, Postoffice and Navy departments, and from several of the various Federal agencies. Receiving with Mrs. Roosevelt at the last tea were Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. James A. Farley and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt attended the Jackson Day dinner given by the national Democratic committee at the Mayflower last night. Mrs. Roosevelt remained only a short time at the dinner, and later attended the dinner given in her honor at the Willard by the Young Democrats as a junior Jackson Day celebration.

Take Your Fat Off Your Mind!
Are you one of those people who are forever worrying because "everything they eat goes to fat?"
Then stop worrying right now—because here's a simple, easy, pleasant way to correct that condition, bring your weight down to normal. Without dieting, without exercises, without drastic purging!
For many years physicians the world over have known and prescribed a famous corrective for abnormal obesity. It has been taken with amazingly beneficial results by thousands of women who were "too fat."
This corrective is the chief active ingredient of Marmola, prepared in tablet form by one of the leading medical laboratories of America. You simply take a tablet of Marmola 4 times a day, and start at once to get rid of burdensome fat.
It sounds miraculous, but thousands of women who have taken Marmola, as directed, might well tell you this story if they had the chance.
Since 1907, more than 20,000,000 packages of Marmola have been purchased—and what greater recommendation can be had?
Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day when you first learned about this wonderful reducing agent!
Marmola is on sale by all dealers—from coast to coast.—Advt.

Care of Hands Has Become Strict Science

Beauty Expert Offers Cotton Night Gloves Free With Sales This Week.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

CARE of the hands is no longer the haphazard matter it used to be. On the contrary! Women realize now that hands can state a case for or against them—according to their appearance. If they are soft, smooth and lovely to look at then they speak eloquently in your behalf. But if the skin is rough, the nails unkempt, and there's an effect of general unrepair, then the things that hands do tell! And not very nice things, either.

One woman who has devoted the last 25 years to a scientific study of how to cultivate hand beauty makes a grand offer this week for one and all of us. With the purchase of one of her products, such as a hand smoother, or softener cream, hand mask, massage cream, whitener or lotion, she presents you with a pair of comfy night gloves made of a soft clinging cotton material.

After you've applied your hand cream you slip on these flesh colored gloves and they will make your treatment doubly beneficial. You can wear them during the day when you're pottering around the house. They're certainly no bother, and they're grand for the hands.

One of our hand specialist's newest products will be a joy to you. It's a rich liquid cream that comes in an attractive squarish bottle. Just a few drops will protect your hands from sun and wind, relieve rough and chapped conditions, and give your skin the feel of velvet. It's a fragrant cream, with the appealing fragrance of gardenias. And a most delightful thing to use. It leaves no trace of stickiness nor grease. You'll be amazed to note the change for the better in your hands if you keep a bottle of this gardenia lotion close by and use it religiously after every hand wash.

And remember—if you buy the lotion this week, you'll receive a pair of gloves free of charge!

Striking Chinese Rings.

WOMEN whose taste runs to costume jewelry will be enthusiastic over the Chinese rings in a local store. They are fascinating! Strange, mysterious jewels in fantastic settings, looking as though they had a history thousands of years old!

The woman with attractive hands who wants to call attention to them can find few better means than wearing one of these striking Chinese rings. Price, $1.

Men's Flannel Robes.

IF SANTA wasn't very kind to your husband and left him only ties, socks and handkerchiefs, and these not at all to his liking, why don't you surprise him with some little something while the Christmas check holds out?

For instance, a flannel robe. It's pretty nice, you know, to come home evenings, peel off the coat and vest and settle back, warm and cozy, in a light-weight robe. One downtown store is showing some now that are priced at $1.65. They come in small and large checks in a variety of colors.

In the same store you'll find some silk-lined brocaded robes in numerous designs reduced from $8.50 to $6.15.

Bath Crystals Reduced.

IF YOU were shopping for bath crystals a few weeks ago and came across those made by a famous French house, you might have noticed the price was $1.65. Now, if you go shopping for crystals, you'll find the same ones reduced to 49 cents. A drastic reduction, yes—but good news to all who like crystals that are wonderfully endowed with rare fragrance.

Attractive Vanities.

IT'S HARD to say nay to an attractive vanity set and it's practically impossible to resist the one in the toiletries section of a downtown store. Here you'll find a small comb inclosed in an attractive case, and a compact to match, both of them looking frightfully expensive. It's worth a couple of hearty hurrahs when you find they are well within reach of a light purse or moderate budget.

These dainty little accessories come in delightful pastel colors, pink, blue, and yellow, which are ideally suited to cruise clothes and spring outfits in the offing.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: On December 30 you published a very interesting and very pathetic letter from a 26-year-old woman, who signed herself "Unwanted." At 26 no ordinary woman should be "unwanted," certainly not one as intelligent and as fine as that correspondent seemed to be. Your reply was very helpful, and I am writing you with the desire to be of further help to her. No doubt you are familiar with the course on charm given by Margery Wilson, 1148 Fifth avenue, New York, but since you did not mention it in your reply to "Unwanted," I am herewith calling it to your attention, with particular reference to "Unwanted's" case.

• • • •

It is my opinion that if Miss "Unwanted" will invest in this course and get in touch with Miss Wilson without further loss of time, she will not long remain unwanted. This course would have been of inestimable value to me if I had had opportunity to study it when I was 26, and it is with the sincere desire to be of service to this other woman that I am mentioning it . . . Cordially, COLUMN READER.

• • • •

DEAR COLUMN READER: Rumors have reached my ears from time to time concerning the course of study in charm offered by Margery Wilson, but having no firsthand acquaintanceship with its nature or value, I do not feel myself qualified to recommend it. It may be all you claim for it, and the obvious sincerity of your representation leads me to use this means of calling your suggestion to the attention of "Unwanted." M. H.

Is It a Pearl?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Some time ago when eating oysters I bit down on something which looks like a little round stone. I am wondering if it could be a pearl. Where could I take it or send it in order to find out? Thank you for any suggestions. Yours truly, MRS. C.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. C.: You may carry or send the "little round stone" to Dr. R. S. Bassler, head curator of geology at the National Museum, Constitution avenue at Tenth street northwest, Washington, D. C., and he will promptly tell you whether or not it is a pearl and if it commands any cash value. The chances are it is perfectly worthless, however, even if it is a species of pearl. Dr. Bassler's office is on the third floor of the National History Building of the museum. Any of the guards can direct you to him, if you choose to call in person. M. H.

Dinner Menu Can Be Varied By Use of Soup

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOU are a little weary of the usual dinner menu—meat, potatoes, a vegetable, salad and dessert—try the menu suggested for today. You will be surprised to find that a rearrangement of courses as well as dishes can do a lit in bringing variety into your menus.

Old-fashioned potato soup garnished lavishly with finely minced parsley has been suggested as the first course, and it should be served up in large bowls instead of the usual cream soup or bouillon cups. You will find any of the other old-fashioned soup recipes—black bean, navy bean, lentil or corn chowder—just as tempting as the potato soup.

Cream of Onion and Potato Soup
(for six)

3 cups scalded milk
1 cup potato water
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
4 medium potatoes
4 onions
1 tablespoon chopped parsley.
Salt and pepper

Boil the potatoes and onions together, until tender. Drain. Save the water and rub the vegetables through a coarse strainer. Make a white sauce of the liquid, flour and fat and combine with the potato and onion pulp. Season with chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Beat with an egg beater before serving.

MENUS FOR TODAY,

BREAKFAST
Grapefruit sections
Dry cereal with top milk
Creamed dried beef on toast
Coffee Milk (for children)

LUNCHEON
Codfish balls with escalloped tomatoes
Spanish onion and orange salad with French dressing
Whole wheat bread and butter
Chocolate cake with mocha frosting
Hot tea Milk (for children)

DINNER
Old-fashioned potato soup with chopped parsley
Melba toast Strawberry preserves
Broccoli with hollandaise sauce
Asparagus tip, pimiento and hard-cooked egg salad
Butterscotch tapioca

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

A LADY WHO LOVES pretty colors appealed to us for an idea for making her bathroom brighter. And being a big-hearted soul we presented her with several! "I have the usual bathroom—white fixtures and white tiling, one window and not very much space," said she. "Will you give me some ideas for decorating it? I hope to get a dressing table in one small space; otherwise I can't do much except with the walls, shower curtains, towels and window. I can get a new hamper, too." . . . We suggested that she have the walls painted silver and then use coral colored towels. Then she could get her dressing table, hamper and scales in silver or coral and have a coral-colored shower curtain and white glass curtains. Or, she could have the walls in dark, brilliant red and use powder blue for towels, curtains, mat, hamper and dressing table. Other color schemes that could be worked out for bathrooms are lemon-yellow walls, hamper and dressing table, with green and white towels and mat—pencil blue for the walls, hamper and dressing table, pale pink for the towels, curtains and mat, jade green for the walls, hamper and dressing table, brown and beige for the towels, mat and shower curtains—bright blue for the walls, hamper and dressing table, red and white for curtains and towels, lilac for the walls, hamper and dressing table, peach for the curtains and towels.

Discuss Women's Work in Coming Campaign

Democratic Women Meet Here To Lay Campaign Battle Plans

NATIONAL COMMITTEEWOMEN from many parts of the country gathered at the Women's National Democratic Club yesterday to hear a formal call to campaign colors, as they relate to the Democratic women's program.

Speakers for the occasion were Miss Mary W. Dewson, chairman of the general advisory board of the women's division of the national committee, and Mrs. James H. Wolfe, director.

"We must fight against special and vested interests, and without a large part of the press," said Miss Dewson. "This means we must rely on reaching a large number of people through the radio, through personal contact and by speaking before audiences at every opportunity."

Complimenting women on the efficient organizations developed throughout the country, Miss Dewson continued, "More women are doing effective work in politics today than ever before. What we want, of course, is equal representation of women with men on all committees. While that has not been attained in every state, I have observed a steady growth toward this end."

Definite Contribution.

In this connection she also stressed, "I have never been a feminist with a capital 'F,' but I know women of this country have a definite political contribution to make when they have an opportunity to work with men on a 50-50 basis. Getting that opportunity depends largely on what women prove they can do."

She mentioned the way in which local women's organizations had cooperated with the national women's division in carrying out the "Reporter Plan," designed to keep people informed about measures initiated by the Administration. Discussing methods of financing local organizations, she said she highly favored the "Donkey-bank plan, which gives every woman an opportunity to make a contribution—no matter how small—to her local committee. Contributors to any cause are loyal workers for it," she went on. "Women who give financial support to the party through this channel will feel they have a definite part in a program that has as its sole aim a square deal to every man."

AAA Is Discussed.

Mentioning the Supreme Court's decision regarding the AAA, Miss Dewson offered the opinion, "This Administration won't let the farmer down."

She urged committeewomen to fight tactics "of those persons who try to frighten voters with ominous prophecies of higher taxes and dire results that may result from New Deal projects. "Our job is to educate the public about what the Administration is trying to do for the country as a whole through helping those who suffered most from the depression," she said. "Our fight will not be easy; we cannot expect a tidal wave in our favor, such as we were privileged to experience in 1932 and 1934, but I am confident our army of organized, trained women will help to bring us victory next November."

In conclusion, she also emphasized, "Much has been made of the large expenditures made by this Administration and by our party; yet within the last year the Liberty League, supported by vested interests, has raised more campaign funds than we have—in the last four years."

Critics Assailed.

Following Miss Dewson's speech Mrs. James H. Wolfe offered a number of suggestions "to help combat criticism now being leveled at the Democratic program. Our adversaries attempt to frighten us with the bogy of high taxes that threaten our children and grandchildren," she said. "They seem to forget the condition of the country prior to this when prices were lower and jobs were fewer. They fail to remember that taxes grow larger only as incomes increase, and that this country has resources that will develop in time to meet the current indebtedness, just as they did following the period of the war when our national debt was $14,000,000,000.

"As panic dies down, criticism raises its head and ingratitude grows bold," she continued. "But we must push on toward our goal. We must keep the public informed on projects the Administration has initiated for the good of the country as a whole.

This very week the Supreme Court's decision against the AAA makes it imperative that we let the public know what the loss of a planned farm economy, designed to increase the purchasing power of approximately one-fifth of our population, will mean."

Following the meeting a buffet luncheon was served at the club.

Among the committeewomen who attended the meeting and luncheon were the following: Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, District of Columbia; Mrs. D. A. McDougal, Oklahoma; Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Pennsylvania; Mrs. Hortense K. Wells, Florida; Mrs. Florence Farley, Kansas; Mrs. Teresa M. Graham, Idaho; Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee, Maryland; Mrs. T. S. Taliaferro, Wyoming; Mrs. Elizabeth Conkey, Illinois; Mrs. Samuel White, Arizona; Miss Beatrice Cobb, North Carolina; Mrs. L. M. Jennings, South Carolina; Mrs. Caroline O'Day, New York; Mrs. Charles B. Faris, Missouri; Mrs. Elizabeth M. McNamara, Massachusetts; Mrs. Sam Connor, Kentucky; Mrs. Flora Cotton Etter, Iowa; Mrs. A. Y. Malone, Alabama; Mrs. Charles G. Ryan, Nebraska; Mrs. J. C. Burchinal, West Virginia, and Mrs. Gertrude Bowler, Wisconsin.

Fad Theories May Endanger Child's Health

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

A WHILE ago it was vitamins, then it was glands which held the center of the stage. First Freud, then Jung, Adler and behaviorism caught the fickle fancy of the public. It is the children who suffer for the parents' fads, and they must eventually be in much the same position as the well known chameleon who sat on a plaid.

In their effort to give the child the best that science has discovered, many mothers make the mistake of running after the newest theory, forgetting entirely the one of the day before. The amount of popular medicine which they absorb seems to run through their brains like water through a sieve, and the vitamins are lost sight of when the glands are discovered, Freund is obliterated in favor of behaviorism.

Search for Truth.

Science is a long and piecemeal search for truth. One man discovers one fact; some other man, another. Each discovery is at once published to the world as the last word. But it takes years of experiment and comparative study to fit the new truth into the whole. For each one of these scientific facts, though heralded by the public as the final truth, is only a bit of the picture puzzle.

Calories, vitamins, balanced diet, cod-liver oil, sunlight and fresh air all build up the system and make glands as well as bone and muscle. Heredity and environment both play parts in the child's development. The sub-conscious self and conscious self and conscious conditioning each tell but a fragment of the story.

Forgot Fads.

The mother who runs after every new theory, forgetting the old, will be lucky if the child is strong enough to emerge from the strain uninjured either physically of mentally. She would be wiser if she biddingal--Zcimyofg stuck to the new systems in contract bidding and scoring to find the variety in life which she is seeking.

College Girls Tell Dislikes in Food In Clinic Survey

IF YOU ARE taking your best girl out to dine see that she isn't offered any cauliflower, onions or coffee. These are the three foods most disliked by a group of college girls whose food tastes recently were surveyed by representatives of the Mayo Clinic.

The survey also showed, Science Service reports, that the foods most commonly blamed by the girls with causing indigestion are cabbage, tomatoes and peppers.

One hundred girls at Spartanburg, S. C. were questioned concerning their food tastes by Dr. W. C. Alvarez, Dr. H. C. Hinshaw and Dr. Ruth Frank. The information was obtained to round out a study recently made of patients who came to the clinic suffering from functional types of indigestion.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

By Pattie Ellicott.

WHEN you ask Senator Arthur D. Vandenberg, of Michigan, potential Republican candidate for the Presidency, about his favorite foods, it's dollars to doughnuts that doughnuts will be included in the list.

His attractive wife, Mrs. Vandenberg, active in senatorial and social circles in the National Capital, and noted for her civic endeavors, can make the doughnuts herself, if necessary.

Some time ago, Mrs. Vandenberg furnished a recipe for "potato doughnuts" to a compilation of recipes by Congressional ladies which was tried by many with success.

But plain doughnuts are just as welcome in the Vandenberg household and when Mrs. Vandenberg's cook has a baking of doughnuts to "surprise the Senator," regulation recipes are used.

Properly prepared the doughnut does not deserve its reputation for indigestibility.

Doughnuts.

2½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
¾ cup rich milk
1-3 cup sugar
Dash nutmeg

Dissolve sugar in milk in mixing bowl, add melted butter, and well-beaten eggs. Sift in two cups flour, baking powder and salt together. Mix well to dough, add a little more flour. Sprinkle other half cup flour on biscuit board. Roll dough in sheet one-half inch thick. Cut with doughnut cutter. Fry in deep, hot fat, basting with spoon until nicely browned. Drain and sprinkle while warm with pulverized sugar.

Nagging Called Worst Offense

Writer Warns Parents Not to Talk Too Much to Children.

A GOOD New Year's resolution for parents is not to talk too much. When your child alibis his failure to obey you by saying, "I didn't hear what you said," it is probably nothing but the truth, according to a writer in the current issue of the Parents' Magazine who flatly declares that the parental voice, too often heard, becomes a sound that the youngster, unconsciously, shuts out.

The inference is that when you have something to say to a child, see that you have his attention before giving him a command. Then see that the command is obeyed, but do not talk on and on.

To nag is one of the worst offenses against a child. Most of the things children want to do are harmless and if we think before we speak we would not need to refuse them permission . . . Many a parent warns a child against undesirable conduct and by so doing puts ideas in his mind . . . If a child's confidence is constantly interrupted by scoldings or correction, he will soon form the habit of not confiding at all.

Common Sense Treatment Best For Neurotics

Wisdom by Physician Is Essential in Dealing With Nervousness.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IT has been estimated that more than half of those who consult a physician for some form of nervousness will show no signs of organic disease. In other words, the symptoms do not mean that the cells of the body or any of the vital organs are affected. Nevertheless the condition complained of may be almost soul destroying, so severe in its manifestations that the individual is utterly unable to adjust himself to his surroundings.

When such a patient presents himself to a physician great care must be exercised to rule out organic disease. There are those with whom the constant and slow absorption of poison from some source will finally break down judgment, destroy mental poise and nullify the ability to carry on straight thinking. Naturally, in these persons, infections must be removed, but mistakes must not be made in interpreting the symptoms properly. The number of men and women who have been subjected to surgical operations as the culmination of a set of perfectly obvious functional symptoms is large.

Sometimes hysterical reactions occur in high strung individuals who simply cannot face reality and who adopt this method to avoid grappling with a difficult personal or family problem. Others will exhibit morbid fears, such as impending death or approaching disaster to some member of the family.

With but few exceptions these conditions are curable. All that is needed is a conscientious physician who has a knowledge of the principles of psychotherapy. The patient must be accepted at face value and managed with great sympathy and understanding, as a physical problem. The one who advises the victim that there is nothing wrong with him and that all his symptoms are the result of imagination only accelerates the progress of the disease There is something wrong Disease does exist and the physician who fails to recognize it has either received a faulty training or is derelict in his duty.

Paramount Has Survived Many Fiscal Crises

Is Still Going Strong and Promises Great List of Major Productions.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The contiguous announcement of the imminent release by Paramount of two such noteworthy pictures as "The Bride Comes Home," starring Claudette Colbert, with Fred MacMurray, and "The Rose of the Rancho," starring the screen debut of that eminent Metropolitan Grand Opera star, Gladys Swarthout, brings back to the mind of the veteran filmster memories of the days when Paramount symbolized the ultima thule in cinematic accomplishment.

It was more than a quarter of a century ago when this distinguished company, which has contributed some of its most enduring works to the permanent honor roll of the cinema, had its inception in a small barn that still stands on the back of the Paramount lot in Hollywood.

The picture that gave the company its initial impetus in the direction of its subsequent honorable achievements was the film version of "The Squaw Man," in which the late Dustin Farnum was the star.

Mr. Farnum, fearful of the motion picture's ability to survive on its own merits, declined a part-ownership in the company and worked on a straight salary—a trifling matter of injudicious judgment that cost him millions.

"Time Marches On."

Those who went in on the deal were Jesse L. Lasky and Cecil B. De Mille, both graduates of the so-called legitimate theater, who thought they saw a future in the "movies." Jesse L. Lasky since has departed the Paramount lot, but Mr. De Mille's production of "The Crusades" was one of the few films worthy of being "road showed" this season, and it was a Paramount "special."

Paramount weathered many vicissitudes in the old days. Although it was the first production company that was able to supply the exhibitor with a complete program—everything from feature picture to newsreel and a Burton Holmes travelogue—it nevertheless encountered many stormy periods. During one of them, when an antagonistic group sought to wrest control of the company from Adolph Zukor, the shrewd Bavarian who founded it, Mr. Zukor organized the "Bluebird Pictures Corporation, Inc." It had a formidable list of stars, but when the fiscal flurry subsided it was forgotten and Paramount once again was paramount.

Frohmans Took a Hand.

In those old days the Zukor dominance was supreme. Jesse L. Lasky, who, coupled with the contributions to the art of cinema engineered by Daniel Frohman and involving all of the Charles Frohman theatrical properties and stars, gave rise to the pseudonym of "Famous Players-Lasky," the name of "Paramount" was about the last word that could be spoken in extollation of the industry of picture-making.

Then came the war, as Joe Penner would sing. Another war of financial interests. Zukor stood fast. Jesse Lasky, along with Sidney R. Kent, in charge of sales and distribution; Charles E. McCarthy, public relations counsel—as they call it in "Personal Appearance," current at the National—and numerous others of the executive staff, saw an opportunity at the Fox Movietone City plant. They embraced it. And Paramount was supposed, again, to be on the rocks.

Paramount is not on the rocks. It is providing the silver sheet with some of its most engaging charades. Among them, no doubt, will be "The Rose of the Rancho."

I well remember when this play was produced on the stage of the Belasco Theater, in this city, by the late David Belasco, as the first individual starring vehicle for the brilliant talents of Miss Frances Starr, now a resident of Washington, known in private life as Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson.

Your Reporter Was Cooked.

An old West Indian pal of mine played a minor character part in "The Rose of the Rancho"—Dick Conover, who had been an assistant to the superintendent of mails for the Island of Puerto Rico, who was a guy by the name of Nelson B. Bell.

So I saw the first night of "The Rose of the Rancho" from backstage, and never have I had a more uncomfortable experience.

Belasco was a sticker for realism. So in the plaza scenes of "The Rose," at midday, he simulated tropical sunlight by utilizing the most amazing battery of spotlights I ever have seen. I was planted among a million of these miniature blast furnaces and, with no means of escape, was cooked to a delicious and sizzling dark brown!

I never have forgotten the premiere of "The Rose of the Rancho" and so am especially anxious to see what the premiere of Miss Swarthout's musicalized version of the Richard Walton Tully story may bring forth.

Wouldn't you be, under the circumstances?

Paramount Presents
THE PICK OF THE PICTURES!

Best Shows in Town for January

The show world's pick of the pictures! Come and have a grand time...Look at these three productions leading the Paramount Parade for 1936...Look at the stories...Look at the stars...Names that fill you with eager expectations...Pictures that come from triumphs of the stage and literary world, all produced under the guiding hand of Ernst Lubitsch...Each picture the week's high spot in entertainment.

"COLLEGIATE"
JOE PENNER • JACK OAKIE

INTRODUCING Joe Penner!!! ...That goofy duck salesman is back again with more laughs than ever! He and Jack Oakie have recovered from the hilarity of "College Rhythm"...and they're starting in again from where they left off! Only this time they're running a girls' school and they've got a couple of brand-new ideas on education!...Frances Langford, lovely radio songstress, and a cast of your comedy favorites support the stars!...Ralph Murphy directed it...Gordon and Revel, who wrote the "College Rhythm" score, wrote the song hits that you'll be whistling all season!

"THE BRIDE COMES HOME"
starring CLAUDETTE COLBERT • FRED MacMURRAY with ROBERT YOUNG

If past performances mean anything this one has all the earmarks of a smash hit...Claudette Colbert, whom you loved in "It Happened One Night", and in "The Gilded Lily", as the wise-cracking heroine...Dapper, Fred MacMurray, another "Gilded Lily" alumnus and a sensation in "Hands Across the Table", as the guy she's in love with—and how she hates it!... And speaking of "The Gilded Lily", let us remind you that Director Wesley Ruggles and Author Claude Binyon were responsible for that comedy...Now they've outdone all their previous efforts in this new romantic triumph, "The Bride Comes Home".

"ROSE of the RANCHO"
JOHN BOLES • GLADYS SWARTHOUT

Somebody at the studio got the idea of filming a big outdoor "musical", filled with riding shooting, singing, romancing. So we got beautiful Gladys Swarthout to play the heroine (you've often heard her golden voice on the radio)...and John Boles as the hero...We hired practically a whole Mexican army. We gave David Belasco's grand story of gold rush days in California a grand production, directed by Marion Gering. And then we got the best song writers on the coast to write a whole set of new tunes! ...P.S. Herb Williams and Willie Howard for laughs!

FROM OUT WHERE THE STYLES BEGIN...

Doesn't Miss Swarthout look the very picture of a most alluring Spanish Senorita in this picture? ...Notice the wide flaring skirt of dainty organdy ruffles—contrasted by the fitted dark taffeta bodice repeating flattering organdy ruffles at throat and wrist...and the dark lace "mantilla." When next you are invited to a costume party—remember this!

Claudette Colbert has an interesting wardrobe in "The Bride Comes Home." Claudette plays a girl whose millionaire father lost his fortune...so she has to look well-dressed even though she can't spend much for apparel—even as you and I!...You'll adore the two-piece black-and-white frock that blends so well with the black Breton hat worn in the illustration.

INSIDE NEWS of the PARAMOUNT STUDIO...No wonder they call Ernst Lubitsch the Master Hit-Maker of the Movie World!...Have you noticed the great performances that such stars as Gary Cooper, Ann Harding, Claudette Colbert, Margaret Sullavan, and Sylvia Sidney—to name just a few—have given in the past couple of months? Of course you have! And have you wondered what magic brought them to such heights? Or are you one of those who recognized the famous Lubitsch touch...the touch that takes star, story and setting and turns those elements into a great show?...Now —when you see the grand pictures that Paramount will have for you in February —Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich in "Desire," Harold Lloyd in "The Milky Way," and Bing Crosby, Charlie Ruggles and Ethel Merman in "Anything Goes"—you'll see grand entertainment with stars who are giving the greatest performances of their careers inspired by the supervision of the Master Hit-Maker of the Movie World—Ernst Lubitsch!

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

POPEYE and OLIVE OYL are going to do their stuff in a new and bigger way this year. In short, we're casting that spinach devouring sailor man in a new series of shorts! The first one is "Vim, Vigor and Vitaliky."

...if it's a paramount picture...it's the best show in town!

Many Assail Health Fund Slashes Here

Local Medical Society Advances 5-Point Expansion Plan.

Angry protests at proposed Budget Bureau slashes in Washington's health facilities arose in the District last night.

The managing director of the District Tuberculosis Association, Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, issued a statement rapping the bureau's 1937 budget plans, which would close the Old Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, "in order that the Federal budget may be balanced."

The District Medical Society launched a campaign to rouse citizens to petition Congress to expand the Health Department's program so as to include:

1. Enlarging nursing and school inspection services.
2. Replacing wornout equipment in the Health Department laboratories.
3. Giving adequate space to the department.
4. Increasing personnel at Gallinger Municipal Hospital.
5. Continued use of the Tuberculosis Hospital.

Held Essential.

Only so, the District Medical Society resolved last night, can Washington hope to reduce its present enormous death rate.

Taking note of the National Emergency Council order forbidding officials to advocate any legislation except with specific permission of the Budget Bureau, the society said this order would prevent city officials from making any direct representations regarding vital needs not approved by the bureau.

The result, the society said, was to "put upon the citizens the necessity for exercising their right of petition in this respect."

The society's public health committee was instructed to investigate cuts made in the budget estimates and to report to the group next Wednesday.

Mrs. Grant's statement recalled that the District's death rate from tuberculosis—123 per 100,000 population—had risen steadily for five years and was second highest in the United States now, while throughout the country, it had gone down.

'Beds Insufficient.'

"Insufficient hospital beds for tuberculosis patients, suffering with this disease in a communicable form, are the greatest contributing factor to our present high death rate," she said, pointing to the fact that Detroit's death rate went down 19 per cent within two years after two beds per each death had been established as the bed ratio there.

The Budget Bureau's proposal to close Tuberculosis Hospital when the adult sanitarium at Glenn Dale opens will mean a total of 861 beds left here for tuberculosis patients, Mrs. Grant said. The ratio would call for 1,274.

"It is not economy to close the hospital until another with a comparable number of beds can be built in the District," Mrs. Grant said, warning that deaths would rise with a reduction in beds.

"Gag" Walker's Idea.

Frank C. Walker originated the broad "silence" order secretly clamped on all Federal and District officials' proposals last month by the National Emergency Council, it was learned yesterday.

It was almost his last act as executive director of the council. The cool, quiet attorney, once treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, retired shortly afterward. He is back in private life now.

The order, revealed by The Post yesterday, requires all officials to clear any recommendations or reports on fiscal matters or general policy through the Budget Bureau before passing them on in any formal manner.

Called Old Policy.

A high Federal official yesterday explained, however:

"It's not as bad as it sounds. Actually, it is only an extension of a policy we've pursued for the last 14 years. Since the Budget Bureau was created, there has always been a regulation that all bills involving fiscal policy must be cleared through the bureau.

"Ninety per cent of the bills coming up involve fiscal policy, so actually all we're doing is extending the regulation to the other 10 per cent."

One or two obejtcions have been made to the new order by officials, thsi authority reported, but "they've all been cleared up."

He asserted that, if nay agency proposed somethnig which did not win Presidential or Budget Bureau approval, it would still be permitted to file a report ot Congress on the proposal. The order would require addition of a paragraph noting the Presidential or bureau disapproval, he said.

"There's no penalty provided for violation of the order," he continued, "but we don't anticipate any violations."

Officials were still permitted, he said, to discuss proposals informally with newspapermen and to submit routine reports without the necessity of bureau approval.

Ballou Coaches Aids on School Magazine Ban

Superintendent Tells Type of Periodicals to Be Cut Off List.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, instructed five special committees of school officers yesterday, in executive session at the Franklin Building on ways to determine whether a magazine circulated in the school system should be continued in use or discarded.

Calling upon the committees to report specifically on each magazine, he listed eight reasons considered "adequate" for ousting any periodical. These were:

Previous use only casual.

Does not serve a worthy educational purpose.

Other magazines of liwe kind are preferable educationally.

Its editorial policy is not well balanced.

It undertakes to indoctrinate pupils in what to think.

It advocates the adoption of un-American policies or institutions.

Every magazine approved for use must be listed with "positive justification," Dr. Ballou told the officers, this to cover such subjects as:

The educational purpose served.

The phase of the course of study or the specific topic with which the magazine is used.

The school subject with which the magazine is used.

What educational effect the discontinuance of the use of the magazine would have on classroom teaching.

Reports will be returned by the various committees as soon as possible, some by the next meeting of the Board of Education, next Wednesday. The survey was instituted last week by Dr. Ballou in line with the anti-communism rider plugged into the District budget by Congress.

One magazine, Scholastic, subscribed to by pupils, but not purchased out of school funds, has been accused of communistic leanings by the Federation of Citizens Associations. For reasons of economy, the list of magazines purchased out of public funds has aldeary been cut in half.

CapitalHospita To Share Funds Of Birthday Ball

Children's Hospital, which faces a financial emergency, will benefit from the proceeds of the President's birthday ball in Washington on January 30, it was learned last night.

District Commissioner George E. Allen, general chairman for the local celebration, has indicated he believes that Children's, because of the nature of its work, should receive all funds from the ball.

This year 70 per cent of the proceeds of the ball will stay in Washington while the remaining 30 per cent will go to the national research committee and to the Warm Springs Foundation.

Yesterday Allen conferred with several committees which will have parts in the various tasks incident to the organization of the ball.

Among them were a group of local theatrical men who will said in promotion work in the theaters and who will furnish entertainment features for the ball.

New Bill Seeks Congressman's Trial at Home

Zioncheck Appeals His Conviction; Moritz Asks Procedure Changed.

A move was made in Congress yesterday to prevent any further trials of members in District of Columbia courts as Representative Zioncheck (Democrat), of the State of Washington, flayed local judges, but failed in an effort to have printed in the Congressional Record a transcript of the Police Court trial in which he was convicted of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Representative Moritz (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, introduced a bill which would permit members of the Senate or House to have transferred to their own districts cases in which they are involved whenever they believe a District judge or jury is biased.

The privilege would be extended to all proceedings, civil or criminal, and the court would be powerless to refuse the change of venue in the face of a penalty of $5,000 damages to the member

All the member on trial would need to do, under Moritz's bill, would be to file a written motion "that judges or juries in said District of Columbia are biased or prejudiced either against him or in favor of any opposite party in said proceeding."

The judge in such an instance would have no choice but the transfer of the case to the United States district court nearest to the member's home.

"No judge shall have power or jurisdiction to pass upon the sufficiency of such motion," the bill reads.

Zioncheck charged to newspapermen that Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey is "a political appointee of Postmaster General Farley" as he dismissed his attorney and appealed from his conviction of drunkenness and disorderly conduct following a New Year's Eve party in a Connecticut avenue apartment house.

Zioncheck said he probably would bring an attorney from Washington State to defend him further.

Zioncheck tried vainly to have a transcript of the court proceedings placed in the Congressional Record yesterday so that "Congress might see what is going on down there."

Landlords Told By Mrs. Norton To Reduce Rent

Failure Will Mean Action by Congress, She Declares.

Washington landlords were warned yesterday by Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, that unless they reduce excessive rents voluntarily Congress will take steps to force reductions.

Explaining that her office had received many complaints from tenants, she expressed the opinion that many residents, especially persons brought here by Congress, are "being gouged by high rents."

"Something must be done," she said. "According to reports I have received, rents were raised immediately after Congress recessed last August and are now higher than last year.

"The low realty tax in the District does not warrant such excessive rents. Owners of apartment houses in other less fortunate cities would be happy to accept rents paid during the depression if they could have their buildings as full as apartment houses in Washington."

Invites Complaints.

Mrs. Norton said she intends to set a time for the receipt of complaints from as many tenants as wish to come to the House Office Building. She will then call in leading realtors and bankers who have investments in real estate and ask them what they intend to do about the complaints.

"If they won't rectfiy the matter," she said, "then Congress will have to do something."

She said she had been informed many tenants are afraid to report boosts in rents for fear that landlords will further raise their rents and possibly blacklist the complainants.

The District committee chairman said that the Ellenbogen rent commission bill may be acted upon by the House at the first District day, next Monday, because of the indignation of many members.

"It would be better, however," she said, "if the bill were held upu until we can hold a hearing and accumulate more data."

Wants More Data.

Mrs. Norton also expressed interest in suggested legislation to reduce fire danger in Government buildings by District inspection and in rooming houses by tightening the laws affecting private residences that are converted into small apartment houses.

"I think this matter should be handled by the District Commissioners," she added. "I want to cooperate with Senator King (chairman of the Senate District Committee) in putting through a bill to give the Commissioners broad enough powers to adopt such regulatory measures without special legislation by Congress."

U. S. Moves to Establish Title To Rock Creek, Potomac Beds

Seeking to clear up the disputed title to certain portions of the beds of Rock Creek and the Potomac River, the Department of Justice yesterday filed with the District Supreme Court a request that it adjudicate a dispute between the Government, the trustees of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Assistant Attorneys General H. W. Blair and Henry H. Glassie stated in the Government's petition that the canal company is now insolvent and the canal no longer in operation. Numerous changes have been naturally effected in the course of the canal because of a lack of maintenance and the defendant company has laid claim to the "accretions" and fillings which have followed disuse of the property.

An act of Congress of 1912 provided the Department of Justice with authority to institute court action to clear up title to all property in dispute where riparian rights were concerned. The Maryland Legislature, in ceding the District, declared the title to all lands of the Potomac River and Rock Creek beds should pass to the Federal Government. The suit asks that title to all "land, land under water and made land raised out of the water" be declared the property of the Government.

Ellenbogen Moves to Cut Realty Taxes

Representative Seeking to Shift Burden to Incomes.

Despite the wishes of the District Commissioners to withhold new tax legislation at this session of Congress because of the anticipiated 1937 surplus of $3,300,000 in District revenue, Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, yesterday said he planned to hold public hearings on all local tax bills before his sub-committee.

Ellenbogen made his announcement at the first meeting of the year of the House District Committee. He said his major interest is to lower the realty taxes in Washington to shift part of the tax burden to incomes.

The tax bills are not expected to get very far, however, in view of the Commissioners' attitude and the approval of the chairmen of both the Senate and House District Committees. Senator King and Representative Norton agree that no new taxes are necessary inasmuch as the District budget is held to the $43,100,000, as recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Bills Assigned.

The House committee yesterday carefully shied away from the controversy over charges that textbooks used in Washington schools are procommunistic after George E. Sullivan had submitted a resolution from the Federation of Citizens Association demanding an inquiry.

Likewise the airport issue and the Guyer prohibition bill were not discussed.

After some debate the Quinn bill to license beauty operators was returned to a sub-committee. Further hearings were scheduled for next Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock by Representative Palmisano Democrat), of Maryland.

Substitute Ready.

The latter measure was vigorously opposed last session by Representatives Hull Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Jenckes Democrat), of Indiana. The Commissioners have a substitute amendment to the present small loan law which they will offer if the oroginal legislation is repected.

This morning at 10 o'clock the Senate District Committee will hold its first meeting and hea rrecommendations of the Commissioners, the Public Utilities Commission and other municipal administrators.

Committee members are wondering, however, whether the Budget Bureau's new gag rule may not prevent the District heads and their subordinates from talking about legislation which has not been approved by the Budget Bureau or the National Emergency Council.

Friendship Citizens Favor Referendum

The Friendship Heights Citizens Association last night approved Commissioner George Allen's proposal for a law to give the District the right to a referendum. The group, however, took exception to certain sections of the bill.

Appointment of precinct judges, denial of the voting privileges to those having residences in other States and the advisory nature of the referendum were scored. Members o fthe organization felt that the expense of holding a vot would not be to the public interest if the opinion could be disregarded by the Commissioners. They attached an amendment to make any such a vote binding.

Other business of the body included rejection of a proposal to force semiannual inspection of motor vehicles in the District and adoption of another proposal urging Congressional investigation of the alleged use of non-American books in the Washington public schools.

Gas Fumes Fatal To Capital Woman

Miss Vivian Chapman, clerk for the Construction Code Authority, Inc., came home from work late yesterday to find her mother, Mrs. Anna Chapman, 47, lying dead in the kitchen of their home, in the 500 block of Somerset place northwest.

Gas jets of the kitchen stove were open, and the room was filled with fume.

Mrs. Chapman, sales woman for a downtown department store, had never reconciled herself to the loss of her husband, who died five years ago, her daughter told investigating officers.

Roosevelt, Borah Swap Promises—'If I Win'

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, were reported reliably yesterday to have exchanged good-humored promises that if either is elected President next November he will take the othre on a vacation cruise.

The exchange was made with smiles in the presence of a group when Borah attended the recent White House dinner in honor of Vice President and Mrs. Garner. Borah, who has said he would seek the Republican nomination unless some other liberal candidate is put forward, had a long chat with Mr. Roosevelt.

Now Weather Is Given Blame For Depression

Dr. Mills Asserts 5-Year Lack of Storms Cut Man's Energy.

Five years of rising temperatures throughout the world, marked by unusual calm and lak of storms, may have been responsible for the depression, Dr. C. A. Mills, professor of experimental medicine at the University of Cincinnati, theorized here last night.

In those years, unprecedented in weather records, man lost the benefit of the energizing drive of climatic fluctuations. Energy declined. The trend, records indicate, may last a century.

Dr. Mills saw one posible way of overcoming the handicapping trend of climate. That way, he said, was air conditioning—"artificial control of the stimulation under which man may live."

At the Shoreham Hotel, he told the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, Washington chapter, that engineers' control of the temperatures might shape the world's course of events.

Best Temperatures for Man.

Man does best with temperatures between 40 and 65 degrees, Fahrenheit, Dr. Mills told them. The best climate is that which has frequent fluctuations in temperature that are not too severe in stimulating the body or disturbing the mental equilibrium.

But even in a region of such climate come changes.

"There come some periods of weeks, months, or often several years when the storm variability lessens, so that the driving force under which man lives is remarkably reduced," Dr. Mills said.

"We have just assed through the worst such eriod the world has experienced since thermometer records began. For five years, from late in 1929, the earth temperatures rose skyward and unusual calm and lack of storms settled over the world.

"In the summer of 1934, particularly during the extremely severe heat which visited central North merica in July and August, we could see the evidence of this change in climate in the population mass.

"It is almost uncanny the way in which major changes in business activity have coincided with major changes in the climatic drive, and particularly in the last five years of depression has this corruption been most significant."

Dictators' Opportunity.

Dr. Mills went back into history to assert also that in such periods "governments have settled back toward the monarchical or dictatorial type."

"Is it possible that a decline in the energy of the American population mass for the past five years is at the basis of their willingness to accept a more dictatorial form of control from Washington?" he asked.

There should be, he said, some ideal tsandard to aim at in producing artificial indoor climates. He cited Andean plateau climates as goals—evening off both seasonal swings and severe storm fluctuations.

As a first tsep, homes should be built with greater insulation—to facilitate use of air-conditioning apparatus. Radiant heat should be utilized in winter heating, with room temperatures down to about 50 degrees.

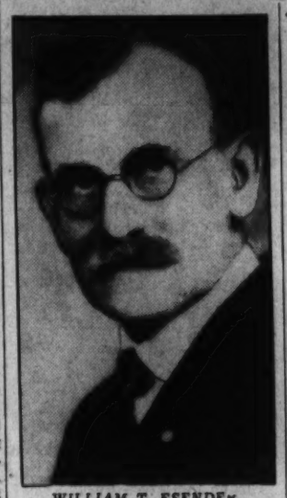
Persons of different ages require different temperatures for comfort. This should be watched in dress—temperatures comfortable for adults may be too warm for children. Persons with chronic infections, susceptible to chills, should dress warmly.

All this would be but a beginning. Both medical and engineering professions must co-operate, Dr. Mills concluded.

Catholic U. Lecture.

The Travels Club of Catholic University will present "A Night in France" tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in the university grounds. An organ recital by Prof. Conrad Bernier and colored motion pictures of the Cathedral of Chartres, with an educational lecture by J. V. Hanson also will be given.

Ex-U. S. Employe, Hit by Trolley, Dies; Traffic Toll Now 6



WILLIAM T. ESENDER.

William T. Esenden Fatally Hurt on Way to Home Yesterday.

Auto Driver Fells Boy, but Police Get Number; Two Exonerated.

Struck by a street car while on his way home yesterday afternoon William T. Esender, 68, retired Navy Yard machinist, was killed, increasing Washington's traffic death list to six for the year. Esender stepped into the path of the trolley at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. At Providence Hospital physicians reported the victim died of a fractured skull and other injuries.

No charges were preferred against the motorman, Redmond E. Hood, 24, of 22 Seventh street northeast. He was released in custody of a Capital Transit Co. attorney pending an inquest.

Esender, who lived at 1411 Potomac avenue southeast, had retired from service in July, 1930, after 41 years at the Navy Yard.

Friends of Esender give him credit for originating the Christmas savings idea locally. They say that soon after the opening of the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, at Eighth streets northwest in 1906, he went to bank officials and asked them to accept a weekly deposit from him, the entire sum to be withdrawn at Christmas. This was the beginning of the Christmas savings plan here, his friends say.

Meanwhile two motorists were exonerated by a coroner's jury after inquest into the traffic deaths of Dr. Horace A. Howes, 67, 1416 Thirteenth street northwest, and Thomas Marlow, 68, 1830 L street northeast.

In the first case, Marshall J. Thompson, 36, of Rosslyn, Va., driver of the automobile that struck Dr. Howes, was acquitted when witnesses testified Howes stepped from behind parked cars into the path of Thompson's machine.

Howes was struck at Wisconsin avenue and M street northwest, October 28. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where he died Saturday.

In the second verdict, James B. Egloff, jr., 28, of 1830 L street northeast, was absolved from blame in the Marlow death. Marlow died in Casualty Hospital Sunday after being struck in the 400 block K street northeast, the day before.

At the time of the accident, Egloff was charged with reckless driving at the Ninth Precinct. He was released under bond to appear at the inquest.

Conflicting testimony was presented to the jury by eyewitnesses. One told the jury Egloff was operating his car without lights, while another discounted this testimony. All witnesses said it was raining at the time of the accident, and that Marlow walked into the street in front of Egloff's automobile.

James Kane, 61, of 409 Third street northwest, was seriously hurt when he was struck by a car operated, police said, by Max Fulton, 28, of 512 Columbia road northwest. The accident occurred in the 2500 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest. Kane was treated at Garfield Hospital for a broken leg and a hemorrhage of the chest. Police charged Fulton with reckless driving.

Reckless driving charges were also placed against Henry R. Jenkins, 22, of Mount Rainier, Md., whose motorcycle, police allege, struck and seriously injured Mrs. Mary Power, 22, of 5361 Sherrier place northwest, at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Police said that Mrs. Power was struck as she was walking to a street car loading platform. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations and possible internal injuries. Jenkins was treated for minor hurts.

A hit-and-run driver knocked down John Young, jr., 7, of 3120 R street northwest, last night as the car entered an alley off Thirty-second street northwest, near Reservoir road. The boy, playing on the sidewalk, suffered a cut over the eye and was treated at Georgetown Hospital. Policemen obtained the car's license number.

Steve Shelton Gaining; Three Confess Holdup

Police Say Trio Sought to Retrieve Cash One Paid on Debt.

Steve Shelton, 25, George Washington University football player, shot and seriously wounded during a filling station holdup Monday night, was reported improved yesterday as three colored men confessed to the robbery and police said they located the gun used in the shooting.

Physicians at Providence Hospital declared Shelton's condition is very good and that they think blood transfusions will be unnecessary.

Mrs. Mary Runyan McCann, daughter of Damon Runyan, famous sports writer, and wife of Richard McCann, Washington sports editor, sent word to the hospital she would gladly give her blood to save Shelton's life if it was necessary. Shelton contributed his blood to Mrs. McCann last year.

Police announced yesterday that Stonewall Jackson, 23, of the 500 block Twentieth street northwest; Stephen Carrington, 23, of the 600 block H street southwest, and Richard Mitchell, of the first block of I street southwest, had confessed the holdup.

Shelton identified Mitchell as the man who shot him and fled with $60. A gun, a .32-caliber automatic thought to have been used in the robbery, was found in Mitchell's home yesterday. Preliminary ballistic tests were made by Lieut. John Fowler, who said he could not tell immediately whether the gun is the same as that which shot Shelton.

Police reconstructed the crime as follows:

Carrington owed $60 to the proprietor of the filling station. He borrowed $12 from Mitchell to make up the amount and took it to Shelton Monday afternoon.

That night Carrington, Jackson and Mitchell went to the station, and Mitchell went inside. He demanded the money from Shelton. Shelton was shot in the scuffle and Mitchell rifled the cash register and took the rest of the money from Shelton's pockets.

Police officials commended Policemen J. F. Phelps, P. C. Wheeler, W. D. Perry, B. F. Day, R. S. Best, J. F. Bell and I. J. Moore for the quick solution of the crime.

Fall Injures Carpenter.

Falling two stories to a concrete floor from the scaffolding on which he was working on the new State Theater in Falls Church, Hannon C. Byrd, 47, carpenter, of East Falls Church, suffered possible fractures of the skull and back and several broken ribs yesterday. An ambulance took him to Georgetown Hospital.

Meyers. MENS SHOP 1331 F STREET

Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy Make the Title of "Riffraff" Completely Valid

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

You would hardly know the difference.

What I mean to say is that Jean Harlow as a platinum, a degree of blondeness which she invented—and should have copyrighted—and as a "brownette" betrays so little difference in coloration that no one ever would notice the slight variation.

To be sure, she no longer is a silver-haired siren, but she is a vivid blonde, just the same, and as our old friend, Lillian Russell, used to say, "all blondes are man-eaters."

That is about what Jean is in "Riffraff," which we of the so-called critical fraternity previewed yesterday afternoon in the private projection room of Old Sam Wheeler's Fox Film Exchange.

Is Strong Meat.

"Riffraff" is not the daintiest of the recent film releases. It harks back to Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery's "Min and Bill," Jim Cagney's "Here Comes the Navy" and other melodramas of the Frisco waterfronts that might be tolled off, in which the "dames" always get the worst of it and the boy friends bruise themselves no end in fisticuffing of a very ornate nature.

That is what Spencer Tracy does in the instant case. He is the egotistical tuna fisherman whose swell-headedness leads him to believe that he is a leader of men. While he is taking the bumps, he also lets his blonde and beautiful wife in for a few, too—including a long stretch in prison for swiping some money to do him a favor. There is a baby in the case, also, which adds to its ostensible "heart appeal."

The whole thing adds up less to heart appeal than it does to a skillfully contrived symposium of all the camera devices that ever were contrived to lend "punch" to melodrama and wallop to pulchritude.

Escape Strains Credulity.

To my notion, the whole business gets a bit thick with the prison break through the man-hole and the sewer, but perhaps I am just an old purist who dislikes to see tough young ladies subjected to this sort of uncomfortable thing!

There is a deal of socialism mixed up in the working out of the plot—what with the dock strikes, the discomfiture of Hattie's man and all that—but it works out in the end on the side of comparatively sound melodrama—with the accent on the "sound," since Jean and Spencer Tracy, her hard-berled leading man, yell at each other most of the time when both are, so to speak, "on stage."

"Riffraff," to be candid about it, is pretty sordid stuff. It nevertheless possesses many of those stalwart elements of what the vernacular calls "hokum" to place it safely in the "hit" column. It gives both the Harlow and Spencer Tracy opportunities to do those case-hardened, Bessemer steel things in which they are most proficient.

There is no intention here and now, the midnight hour and deadlines being what they are, to go into a detailed review of this exciting and lengthy picture.

Support Stands Out.

It has a great many admirable performers in it in addition to Harlow and Tracy. Among them might be named Una Merkel, J. Farrell MacDonald, George Givot, Joseph Calleia and a score or so more.

This George Givot person, to whom reference will be found in other columns of today's theater pages, is perhaps the most adept of the cinema's contemporary dialecticians. What he can do to the English tongue is nobody's business, barring possibly Joe Calleia's. Calleia does just about as much mangling of it as George does.

The combination is, to all intents and purposes, unbeatable.

There is a fellow in the cast, too, by the name of Joe Phillips. He and George Givot both will headline the vaudeville portion of the bill when "Riffraff" is shown on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning Friday.

This is something you will want to see, unless my sense of public taste has gone completely haywire.

In Dickens Film Opening Today

When Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities" inaugurates its Washington run on the screen at the Palace Theater today the principal roles will be played by Elizabeth Allan and Ronald Colman, pictured above. Miss Allan, perhaps, is best remembered for her fine work opposite Clark Gable in "Men in White," on the silver sheet. Mr. Colman is said to perform his most valuable service for the cinema in the part of the admirable Sydney Carton in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a great novel of the French Revolution.

Belasco Opens Run of a Film Of Real Merit

Cast Unknown in America; "Ten Best" Thursday; Theater Chat.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"LA MATERNELLE." Metropolis Pictures Corporation filmization of the Prix Gon court novel of the same name by Leon Frapie, produced by Studios Photosonor, Paris-Courbevoie, featuring Madeleine Renaud, Paulette Elambert, Alice Tissot, Slyvette Pillacier, Mady Berri, Elex Bernard and Delille. Directed by Jean Benoit-Levy and Marie Epstein. Reviewed Tuesday night.

A simple story of the children of Montmartre is here set forth with that down-to-earth integrity, absence of the usual cinematic flamboyance and with that appealing naturalness that characterized, for example, the classic "Maedchen in Uniform"—without that German production's implication of Freudian involvements.

This film was made in France a matter of some two or three years ago and therefore fails to reveal the last moment's developments in photography and directorial treatment. It does not, however, fail to disclose those sterling traits of honesty, simplicity and faithful adherence to life as it is lived in some one or another of the variant strata of society that make for greatness.

The major movement of the plot concerns a young woman of high breeding who is forced to become self-dependent. She chooses a form of social work that throws her in intimate contact with the nondescript inmates of a Parisian day nursery.

One Becomes Infatuated.

One of these youngsters, Marie, becomes completely infatuated with the motherly charm of the young woman who has most to do with her daily conduct. Without any of the alleged implications—which I, for one, frankly never was able to perceive in "Maedchen in Uniform"—Marie becomes intensely jealous of the blonde young woman who eventually usurps the role of instructress to the juvenile charges she is merely supposed to serve as maid. This dereliction leads finally to a bit of romance between Rose and the handsome young doctor who presides over the institution.

The contours of this unadorned story are easily traced in straight and unpretentious lines. Yet there is about it that quality of greatness that attaches to film plays that cling to the fundamental things of life—kindliness, compassion, generosity and tolerance.

There are no names in the cast that mean anything to those who rely on celebrity for attendance at the box office.

Renaud Does Fine Work.

The character of foremost sympathetic appeal is that of the understanding nurse, Rose, played with a superb indifference to theatrical effect by Madeleine Renaud, whose likeness decorates one or the other of these Wednesday theater pages—or so I trust. The kiddie of prime importance in the exposition of the play's profoundly simple significance is portrayed by Paulette Elambert, with that precocious juvenile skill that amounts almost to genius. Mme. Paulin is played with incomparable skill and an amplitude of person that is seldom encountered, by Mady Berri.

The others whose names are recited in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks all acquit themselves with expertness and merit.

The supplementary subjects on a bill that attracted a distinguished first-night audience last evening embrace a wide range of topics. Probably the most noteworthy of the lot was the "Musical Moods" release in which natural-color scenes of Italy were illumined by such musical interpolations as "Chiri-biri Bin," "Funiculi-Funicula," "O, Sole Mio," and "Santa Lucia."

A Novel Cartoon.

Augmenting this fine expedition into the field of musical and visual chromatics was a cartoon comedy, "La Joie de Vivre," that betrayed a completely novel point of view and an equally novel utilization of the feminine delineaments as a source of bizarre amusement.

"The Craters of the Moon," a pseudo-scientific exploration of the wonders of the surface of the dead planet left something to be desired in authetnic realism—since it was filmed largely in our own Natoinal Parks—but the Pathe News got back to actualities with a comprehensive resume of President Roosevelt's "State of the Union" stump speech of last Friday night, which, more than anything else, made clear his notion of the "State of my forthcoming political campaign."

It did not receive a hand—except from the Democratic side of the House sitting in the picture! Which, as a filmization of history, is about what it deserved.

So there comes a letter from Jack Alicoate, enclosing the final results of the vote of 451 drama desks scattered over the country, on the "ten best pictures of 1935." This is a matter that is not to be released until Thursday morning, January 9. On that day you will know the worst in this spot. Having been the only local desk to declare its choices beforehand, I shall be happy to be the first to disclose by what margin I missed the final count-up. It was not by so much. Neither was it quite so good as last year's. Don't hold your breath!

Short-Reel Awards.

Color cartoons still maintain their high standards of supremacy in the shorts subjects field, according to the January awards announced by Jay Emanuel Publications, Inc., publishers of the Exhibitor of Philadelphia, the National Exhibitor of Washington and the New York State Exhibitor, in connection with the monthly judging of motion-picture shorts.

The January award list follows:

TWO-REEL—Dramatic, "March of Time," No. 9; musical, "Katz Pajamas;" serial, "The Fighting Marines."

ONE-REEL—Color cartoon, "Alias St. Nick," "Bon-Bon Parade," "Cock o' the Walk;" novelty, Pathe Topics, No. 2, "Stranger Than Fiction," Nos. 14, 16, 17, Audioscopiks; comedy, "Can It Be Done?" sport, "What's the Answer?"

All subjects selected in the monthly judging are eligible for consideration when annual awards are made in April.

Then there comes a letter from Hollywood, or somewhere in between—I made the fatal tactical blunder of throwing away the envelope with the postmark on it—upon a letterhead which says merely, "George Givot." It is dated January 2, 1936, and reads verbatim as follows:

Dear Mr. Bell: It is with great pleasure that I have the privilege of playing your city again. My engagement, which opens Friday, January 10, will be simultaneous with the showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, "Riffraff," in which I play the part of a Greek lawyer of Joe Calleia's. Hoping I see you during my stay, Yours truly, (Signed) GEORGE.

There is something about "Riffraff" and Mr. Givot, whom I remember cordially from his radio association with my old pal, Fred Waring, as well as for his prior appearances on local stages just across the street from this column. Hope you find it.

Identification Card.

You know this fellow, of course. You've heard of him a million times.

Two States Produced 25% of U.S. Apple Crop

Salem, Oreg. (U.P.).—Oregon and Washington produced 25 per cent of the Nation's commercial apple crop last year, selling 22,832,000 bushels to consuming markets as fresh fruit, Federal agricultural statistics showed.

The States were far below their 38 per cent of 1934 and the five-year average of 32 per cent due to the extremely early and severe cold wave which struck the Pacific Northwest late in October, it was said. Weather since has not been particularly favorable to proper salvage of frozen and damaged fruit. The acid taste of many apples, apparently in good condition otherwise, will render them unsatisfactory except for cider manufacture, predictions said.

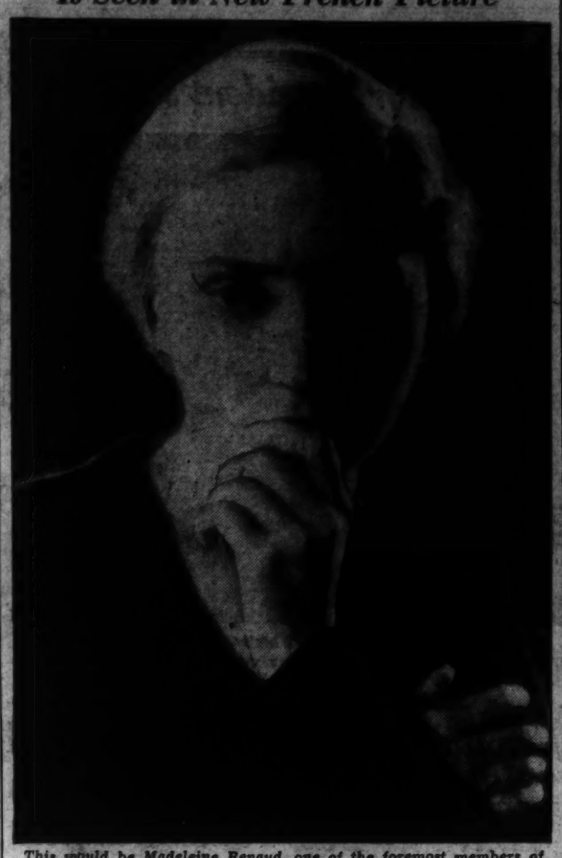
65-Pounder Challenges All.

Hopkinton, Mass. (U.P.).—Michael T. Maloney, 82, says he can lick any man his size. Maloney, once exhibited as the smallest man in the world, is 40 inches tall and weighs 65 pounds. He runs a small farm here.

Skipper Quits After 43 Year

Capetown (U.P.).—Capt. John England, port captain at Table Bay, is to retire from his post after 43 years of seafaring, 33 years of which have been spent in the South African harbor service.

Is Seen in New French Picture



This would be Madeleine Renaud, one of the foremost members of the cast of "La Maternelle," the distinguished French motion picture production, which began a notable local engagement on the screen of the Belasco Theater last night with a brilliant audience in attendance. The initial performance of this sterling work was for the benefit of the Washington Newspaper Women's Club's endowment fund for a bed in Children's Hospital. A distinguished representation of the National Capital's official, society and business circles was in attendance.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Jan. 8.

THE business that the flickers are doing can be gauged by the number of movie boners written in about them, and there is no doubt that "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Tale of Two Cities" and "Captain Blood" are the box office winners. The majority of the boners in "Mutiny" have been printed already, and today's class, in which the movie fans become the critics, starts with "The Tale of Two Cities." In that picture, writes William Kitay, the Marquis, played by Basil Rathbone, is getting his beauty treatment before retiring. A beauty mask is placed over his face. There are spaces for the eyes to peer through which are covered with cellophane. Mr. Kitay insists that it is cellophane, which, of course, was not known to that period.

* * * *

Also in "Tale of Two Cities," Jack Devinsky is annoyed because the assassin who is delegated to kill the Marquis finds the massive castle gates open and unguarded. Especially since the Marquis is hated by his subjects. It's too convenient.

There is an amateur contest sequence in "Coronado," claims Al Nappe, in which Johnny Downs and Jack Haley are on the stage. Johnny starts doing a tap dance and tells Jack to do the same. Haley can't do a step. Later in the flicker, there is a scene of Haley in a prison in Mexico. He tries to make a getaway by tap dancing his way out of the gates—and he does the dance quite professionally.

An obliging actor will do anything that the script calls for.

* * * *

Shirley Temple, in "The Littlest Rebel," is seen sitting on the floor writing to her father, who is in the war. A close-up of the letter, says Sylvanus Post, is shown and it is written in a heavy childish scrawl. Yet later, when Shirley goes over to speak to her mother, there is no writing visible on the partly exposed letter.

Of course, Shirley never wrote the letter. And the entire sequence in which Shirley pretends to write and which the letter with no writing on it is seen was shot the same day. However, Shirley is learning to write. She can write her own name and does for those she or the studio wishes to give a genuine autograph.

When Gene Raymond enters the station in "Seven Keys to Baldpate" he is carrying a small bag. After asking the direction of the hotel, writes Olive Morton, Raymond leaves, still carrying the bag. A few seconds later he is seen walking through the snow with a large brief case as well as the bag. Probably needed more baggage to get into the hotel.

In "Bad Boy," James Dunn is shown in the park listening to an amateur program. Those amateur programs are almost as as many flickers as they are on the radio. Dunn listens to a one-man band on this program and decides he will try out as an amateur, and starts for the radio station. When Dunn gets to the radio station, writes Allen Sherman, which must take at least five or ten minutes, the same one-man band is still playing. He's an amateur who was on long enough to become a professional.

* * * *

Olivia de Haviland looks very pretty in "Captain Blood," but Philip Varga objects because the action takes place in the seventeenth century and Olivia's lips are nicely rouged.

But Miss De Haviland must look pretty for the movie audiences, and if she didn't rouge her lips and use make-up she wouldn't photograph beautifully; besides, the heroine she was portraying never had to face a movie camera, but she was beautiful enough to win the gallant Captain Blood.

A genuine flicker flaw which violates a custom of the seventeenth-century period comes from Jane Leighton, a gal who says she likes her heroes "handsome and stronger." Miss Leighton claims that the sequence in which Olivia De Haviland is seen holding a Pekinese dog is entirely wrong. The Pekinese was the sacred dog of China, and was never out of that country until after the Boxer rebellion.

Old Contract With Macks Scrapped

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Without any of the sound effects characteristic of Babe Ruth's palmy days, Jimmie Foxx, slugging first baseman and heir apparent to the Babe's home run throne, today signed a one-year contract with the Boston Red Sox.

Foxx, sold less than a month ago by the Philadelphia Athletics, came to terms for 1936 after a brief conference with Owner Tom Yawkey and General Manager Eddie Collins, of the Boston Club.

Minus Ballyhoo.

Their meeting took place in Yawkey's New York offices and was minus any fanfare or ballyhoo. No terms were disclosed, but it was reliably reported Foxx will get $25,000 for the coming season, representing a substantial increase over the $17,500 he was understood to have been getting with the A's.

"It was not necessary to draw up a new contract," said Collins. "Jimmie's three-year agreement with the Athletics still has two years to run. We decided, however, that a new contract would be better for all concerned."

Foxx arrived in the city late yesterday, attended a hockey game with Yawkey last night and lost no time today putting his name on the dotted line.

Drew $18,000 From A's.

Philadelphia, Jan. 8 (AP).—The Ledger says the contract Jimmy Foxx signed with the Boston Red Sox today is for one year at a salary of $25,000.

His contract with the Athletics, which was destroyed, still had two years to run, at a figure estimated at $18,000 annually.

He was given the increase after he explained to Tom Yawkey, Red Sox owner, that he would be giving up several contracts, including one for radio broadcasting, when he left Philadelphia.

William-Mary Five Defeats Va., 32-24

Cavaliers Unable to Hold Early Lead; Trail at the Half, 19-11.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 8.—William and Mary's veteran quint won under wraps from Virginia here tonight, 32 to 24. It was the second straight defeat for the Cavaliers, who leave this week-end to tackle strong Carolina teams.

The Virginia team jumped in the lead at the start of the contest and after ten minutes of play enjoyed a five-point advantage. Here the Cavaliers slumped and were able to register but two additional points during the remainder of the half. In the same period the Indians staged a rally that netted 15 points, the count at half time standing William and Mary, 19; Virginia, 11.

Griffith Hints Bonus Terms For Trio

Says He Is Willing to Put Clauses in Contracts of Veteran Pitchers.

ANY of Washington's veteran pitchers who value their services at a higher figure than contracts already mailed to them call for, will be permitted to work under bonus contracts next season, Owner Clark Griffith declared yesterday.

Speaking on the subject of salary arguments that may crop up, Griffith declared that he had no objection to bonus clauses if the pitchers desired to work on that basis.

"There were no bonus clauses in any of last year's contracts," said Griffith, "but if any of my veterans want to gamble on their success on the mound, I will be willing to gamble with 'em. I mean fellows like Earl Whitehill, Buck Newsom and Irving Hadley, who may not like the salary figures contained in the contracts already mailed to them.

Excludes Younger Players.

"If these fellows think that a bonus for a stipulated number of victories will provide them a better incentive to pitch well, then I'll be glad to pay them on that basis. None of the younger players will work on bonus contracts, however. Those who make good get pay raises virtually automatically."

Griffith yesterday announced the signing of Outfielder Jake Powell to a 1936 contract, adding that Powell had been given an increase over his 1935 figure. Powell, one of the rookie sensations of the league, hit .312 and was a fielding star.

Powell yesterday received permission to report to the Nats' Orlando training camp at once due to the illness of his wife and small daughter, for whom the Sothern climate has been recommended. They will depart for Florida on Monday.

C.U. Victory Dinner Now Set for Feb. 3

The Catholic University Orange Bowl victory dinner in honor of the C. U. football team will take place on February 3 instead of the original date of January 16, it was announced last night by the alumni and Washington civic committee, who are sponsoring the event.

The postponement was voted in deference to the requests of out-of-town alumni who preferred a later date. Vincent L. Toomey, chairman of the alumni committee, announced an innovation for C. U. football dinners in the form of an invitation to ladies to attend.

The Lithuanian government last night announced its intention to present a special citation of merit to the six players of Lithuanian extraction on the C. U. squad, including Capt. Ed Karpowich.

All Cubs to Get Raise.

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—For probably the first time in all baseball history, an entire ball club is to get a pay increase.

Nazis Demand Foreign Cash From Olympic Ticket Buyers

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—Many foreigners residing in Germany were unable to purchase Olympic tickets today except with foreign money.

A typical example was one where German money was refused and Brazilian accepted from a young South American who wanted to buy tickets.

This action is caused by a desire to increase the Reich's scant store of foreign exchange, and is tantamount to an increase in exports.

Because thousands will come here for the winter Olympics, beginning February 6, and for the games in August, the German government stands to gain considerable foreign exchange without running a chance of unbalancing its own foreign trade figures, and thereby to ease one of its most pressing problems.

Ban New Travel Bureaus.

Officials moved for further control of Olympic arrangements today by banning the formation of new travel bureaus until September 30, 1936. This decision was taken by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics, with Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and others.

In several apparently minor ways, like stamp issues and the sale of souvenirs, several governmental departments will be in a position to make money.

The municipal porcelain works is making small models of the Olympic bell for sale as souvenirs; the German Olympic organizing committee will sponsor Olympic pins and their sale will help defray expenses of the games; stamps with surcharges bearing pictures of athletes, have been issued by the postal department.

The Olympic Village in Doeberitz is a government venture, for it later will become an army camp; various buildings and stadia are being put up by the government; Reichswehr officers will run the Olympic Village; Hitler youth will be messengers there; cooks are being trained at a Reichs cooking school.

Death Depletes 'Old Guard' of Baseball

Only 2 Magnates Who Held Office in 1920 Survive in Each Big League.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 8.—The passing of the "old guard" of major league baseball has been emphasized with the death of Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants.

Death has so changed the picture that in 16 years Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, has risen from junior club owner to senior among the National League's executives.

It was reported today he will probably be elected vice president of the circuit to succeed Stoneham.

Six of the men who headed National League clubs when Breadon entered baseball in 1920 are dead and the other has long severed his connections.

Roll Call of Dead.

The roll call of the dead of that group includes Charles H. Ebbets, of Brooklyn; Garry Herrmann, of Cincinnati; William F. Baker, of Philadelphia; Barney Dreyfuss, of Pittsburgh; William Veeck, of Chicago and Stoneham.

George H. Grant, of Boston, who retired from baseball in 1923, and Breadon are the only members still living.

In the American League, death has struck as often at men who headed teams back in 1920. Gone are Benjamin F. Shibe, of Philadelphia, James C. Dunn, of Cleveland; Charles A. Comiskey, of Chicago; Harry Frazee, of Boston; Phil De C. Ball, of St. Louis, and Frank J. Navin, of Detroit.

Clark C. Griffith, of Washington, and Jacob Ruppert, of New York, are the surviving 1920 club owners in the circuit.

Danno to Remain In U. S. Until June

Labor Department Allows Wrestler Extension.

Danno O'Mahoney, heavyweight wrestling champion, will be permitted to remain in this country until June 15, it has been announced.

The Department of Labor has granted the extension which will permit the grappler to remain here until next summer instead of returning to Ireland this month as would have been necessary without the extension. This will make O'Mahoney's stay in the United States 18 months, the longest period permitted any athlete.

After returning to Ireland in June, O'Mahony may re-enter this country under the conditions of his first visit here, if he so wishes.

During 1935, O'Mahoney was the greatest drawing card in the mat game. His 154 bouts were witnessed by 820,000 who poured more than $2,000,000 into the box office.

Cochrane vs. Hoppe.

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, and Willie Hoppe, of New York, who hold all the major billiard championships between them, will open their 360-point challenge match for the world's three-cushion title tomorrow.

Gevinson Wins In Amateur Feature

J. P. Morgan Is Victim as Capacity Crowd Sees Guards' Card.

BEFORE a capacity crowd of 567 and with some 30 turned away for lack of standing room in the tiny Armory gymnasium, the first boxing bouts of the recently reorganized National Guard fisticuffing team proved highly successful in every respect last night.

The results:

175-pound class—Bob Grimm won from George Chapple.

Beard and Follows End Track Careers

By the Associated Press.

New York Jan. 8.—Percy Beard, ace hurdler, and John W. (Bill) Follows, crack distance runner, both of the New York A. C., have retired from track and field competition, it became known today.

Beard, now a professor of engineering at Auburn, is one of the greatest timber-toppers this country ever developed. Last year he captured the National A. A. U. indoor and outdoor high hurdle crowns, winning the indoor title for the fourth time and the outdoor for the third. His age—29—and his marriage last year, and his years of competition were a few of the reasons advanced for his retirement.

Follows, a sensation at the 2-mile and 5,000-meter distance since 1933, is quitting the game because he cannot find time to spare from his duties with a Washington political weekly.

Cascarella Led Hurlers.

New York, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—Joe Cascarella, of Syracuse, was the most effective International League pitcher during the 1935 season, according to official hurling averages released today.

Cascarella, who worked in 21 games, turned in the lowest average of runs earned per nine-inning game—2.35.

Colonial Five Triumphs, 38 to 19

Runs Up 38-14 Lead at Wake Forest to Win Third Straight.

Leemans, Kiesel Lead Early Attack With 10 Points Each.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Jan. 8. Maintaining its fast pace defensively and offensively, George Washington University's quintet handily defeated Wake Forest College, 38 to 19 here tonight. It was G. W.'s third straight victory of the season and fourth in five starts, bettering North Carolina's triumph scored last night on the Tar Heels floor.

Not until the second half, following a revision of tactics ordered during intermission by Coach Bill Reinhart, did the Colonials hit their real stride on attack. In this period due to fast cutting for the basket after passing, they piled up ten field goals, most of the on direct assists, and the Deacons were hopelessly out of a ball game that for the first 20 minutes was close. G. W. led at intermission, 15 to 11.

Leemans, Kiesel Star.

Capt. Tuffy Leemans and Hal Kiesel, guard and center, respectively, topped the Colonial scorers with 10 points each, while Tommy O'Brien, sophomore senation, and Ben Goldfaden, last year's leading point maker, each collected six.

With six minutes remaining and the score 38-14, Reinhart replaced his starting five with substitutes.

Catholic U. Beats Mt. St. Mary's

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., Jan. 8.—Catholic University, of Washington, won going away here tonight, defeating the Mount St. Mary's basketball team by a score of 38 to 31 before an overcapacity crowd in the Mount St. Mary's gym. It was the visitors' first victory of the season, they having lost to Duke in their only other game.

Although C. U. led, 18 to 10, at half-time and seemed to have the situation well in hand, the Saints, particularly Dan Kokie and Don Petrini, rallied brilliantly, but the threat stopped just short of its goal. The Cardinals, leading, 29 to 27, with ten minutes to go, once more increased the daylight between the quints.

Yanchulis and Carroll pushed the score to 35 to 27 and Browne and Lieb polished off the proceedings by virtue of a foul shot and a field goal just before the final whistle. Individual scoring honors were taken by Browne, who tallied an even dozen points.

Top Ranking Given Allison Is Report

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 8.—Two New York newspapers today printed unofficial but apparently well-founded reports that the men's national tennis singles rankings for 1935 would be as follows:

No. 1, Wilmer Allison; No. 2, Donald Budge; No. 3, Bryan Grant; No. 4, Sidney Wood; No. 5, Frank Shields; No. 6, Frank Parker; No. 7, Gregory Mangin; No. 8, J. Gilbert Hall; No. 9, Wilmer Hines; No. 10, Kohn Van Ryn.

Grimm Fails to Obtain Davis, Will Stand Pat

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—Balked in his efforts to get Pitcher Curt Davis from the Phillies, Manager Charlie Grimm today said he would stand pat on his 1935 Chicago Cubs for next season's flag race.

"Any team that can win 25 in a row has the stuff," said Manager Grimm, here for a short business conference. "But we'll have to impress ourselves with the idea that a team can't win that many in a row every year."

Bath-Burman Battle Status Still Mystery

New York, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—Status of the heavyweight fight between Hank Bath, of, Colorado, and Red Burman, Baltimore, scheduled for Friday night, remained in doubt tonight.

The boxing commission, which refused to license Bath and his manager, Jack Kearns, suggested to Madison Square Garden Matchmaker James J. Johnston that he seek a substitute for Bath.

Santa Anita Sprint Brings 'Dead Heat'

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 8.—Marv and Lady Bowman finished in a dead heat today to divide honors in the Oceanside Handicap for a $1,200 purse at Santa Anita.

Judges, after looking at the photographer finish, hung up the dead heat sign.

The time, with Barcarolle running third, was 1:10 4-5 for the 6 furlongs.

Lady Bowman paid $4.20, $4.40 and $3; Marv, $3.80, $4 and $3.20.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Mr. Jimmy Foxx,
General Delivery, the Eastern Shore, Md.
Dear Jimmy:

I see by the papers that you signed a one-year contract yesterday to play ball for the Boston Red Sox at $25,000 per annum. It's none of my business, Jimmy, but I wouldn't be particularly proud of that figure—if I were you. It may make you the highest-paid ball player in the American League but it's also an admission that you lack something.

POVICH.

That something, Jimmy, is the added item that enabled Babe Ruth to collect $80,000 for one season's work when he was hitting 'em very little farther than you hit 'em and not much more frequently. Why, Jimmy, the Babe once took a salary cut that equals the amount of your contract, which, I understand, is the most you ever got for playing ball.

And, Jimmy, the Babe never worked for less than $40,000 per annum after he had established himself as a home run king, even in those last few declining years when he was only playing week-ends for the Yankees. 'S tough, Jimmy, but it doesn't look like you can command that kind of a salary with all your home run hitting, your swell fielding around first base and your ability to do most everything that Ruth could do and some things a whole lot better.

You see, Jimmy, you don't have that indefinable something called color. You're just a journeyman, Jimmy, playing your baseball about as spectacularly as a cabinet maker at his lathe or a census clerk at his filing case. They don't pay off on diligence to duty and model conduct in baseball, Jimmy. They begin to take you for granted after a while.

YOU remember the Babe, Jimmy? His surly tongue and his gluttonish appetite kept him in the headlines equally as much as his home run bat, Jimmy, or almost as much. You remember how he was always kicking over the traces, how he carried on his feud with the late Miller Huggins all through Huggins' managerial reign and got himself fined $5,000 and suspended a half-dozen times. Whether the fans were with him or against him, he intrigued 'em and they paid to see the overgrown kid in increasing numbers.

You remember, too, Jimmy, how the Babe with his marvelous lack of restraint got his name splashed all over the front pages a few years ago by an incident here in Washington. That was when, out of a childish sense of loyalty to Al Smith, the Democratic Presidential candidate, he refused a request to pose in a field box with Republican Candidate Herbert Hoover. There was great to do about that; Ruth's managers shouted to the heavens that he had been misquoted and the Babe could make no other excuse, but his name had made the headlines again.

And you remmber also, Jimmy, how the Babe's uncontrollable yen for hot dogs and soda pop gave him those celebrated stomach aches and how they had to carry him off the field as a result. Those were probably the most famous tummy aches in history. Even his appetite helped to put the Babe over as a great public figure.

I DON'T recommend the same tactics for you, Jimmy, but that $18,000 you were drawing down with the A's was a pitiful figure for a fellow of your capabilities. All these years you've really been prostituting your potential drawing power. For a guy who hits 'em the way you can hit 'em, you're woefully underpaid, simply because you're too darn tractable, too good-natured, too self-effacing and too easy-going.

Why don't you get mad sometime, Jimmy? Have yourself a time some night, pick a fight with some guy in the bleachers, work yourself up a nice feud with a pitcher or somebody? The least you could do would be to crawl all over an umpire or two, or sling your bat all the way to the dugout after they've set you down on one of those rotten third strikes. Get out of that easy-going groove and you'll get somewhere in this salary business.

Why, Jimmy, this guy Ruth even made a success out of failure. He capitalized on failure. Even when he struck out, he struck out with such gusto and fire that the fans were satisfied despite the fact that he had hit no home run. They liked it when the Babe socked one over the fence and they liked it when he went down swinging. This is just a tip, Jimmy. No charge.

Morales Is Upset By Florida Youth

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 8.—A home-town youth, Gard Mulloy, unexpectedly upset Cuba's veteran Davis cupper, Ricardo Morales, 3—6, 6—2, 6—3, today in the third round of the Miami Biltmore tennis tournament.

Mulloy, captain of the University of Miami's net squad, overwhelmed his more experienced opponent with powerful forehand drives, forcing the Cuban deep behind the baseline.

Morales staved off defeat briefly in the third set, but Mulloy renewed his offensive and drove to victory.

In another singles match, J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., defeated Enrique Conill, Havana, former Cuban junior champion, 9—7, 6—1. Conill battled the ranked American player almost on even terms in the first set, but wilted in the second.

Hal Surface, Kansas City topnotcher, ran into some difficulty disposing of 17-year-old Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, Ga., but swept second-set resistance aside to win, 6—1, 6—4.

Puerto Rico's Bid Accepted by Reds

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Jan. 8.—Powel Crosley, president of the Cincinnati Reds, announced today acceptance by the National League club of an invitation to do part of its spring training in Puerto Rico.

The club will be the first major league outfit to visit the island. Players will start the trip from New York February 6.

Under tentative plans half of the squad will leave Puerto Rico March 2 for games in Santo Domingo March 3 and 4. They will then return to Miami. The others of the squad will leave Puerto Rico March 9 for Miami. The two squads will unite in Tampa March 10, continuing their training until March 29.

Local Boys to Get The Fistic 'Breaks'

Turner to Stage Eliminations as Body Suggests.

At the suggestion of the District Boxing Commission, Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday agreed to start elimination series in the various District weight classes in order to arouse more interest in the game. It is felt that local boys will revive the "gates" here.

The meeting, a more or less informal affair, was called in an effort to help the sport out of the financial slump that resulted from lack of support of the last two cards.

Bluege On Air.

Ossie Bluege, veteran Washington Club infielder, tonight will be Joe Holman's guest over Station WOL.

He will be interviewed between 8 and 8:15 o'clock.

Fistic Poll Rates Jack Johnson Best

By Bill McCormick.

WITH all the fistic world shouting hosannas for Joe Louis and many proclaiming the undeniably sensatoinal Negro the greatest heavyweight of all time, it is interesting to know just what the old-timers—the fellows who really have seen some fighters—think about the whole thing.

Ferreting here and there among people who have been in the shift and-sock racket since the days when the biggest bouts were held in the rear of the smallest saloons, one is more or less startled to discover that not one of the old masters thinks Louis the greatest heavyweight of all time.

True, most of them agree that Joe is a great fighter, perhaps even the greatest, but refuse to admit his all-time superiority until he has been more severely tested.

Derided by Johnson.

Although Louis is not voted the greatest heavyweight of all time, the award in the poll made by us goes to another Negro noggin-nocker—Jack Johnson, the only colored man ever to win the heavyweight championship and the same guy who now devotes most of his time to telling the world that Joe is not a great fighter—not even a good fighter.

From a poll of 16 people from every branch of the fight industry, four votes are cast for Johnson as the greatest heavyweight of all time. Gene Tunney and Bob Fitzsimmons run the former Negro champion a close second by polling three votes each. Sam Langford, another Negro, wins two ballots in the consensus, as does James J. Jeffries.

Strangely enough, Jack Dempsey, one of the most colorful of all ring figures, receives only one vote for the chimerical honor and Luther McCarthy, the sensation who was killed in a bout when only 21, also polls one ballot.

AL LIPPE (who managed Billy Papke, Joe Gans, Abe Attell and many others): "I think Jack Johnson was the greatest heavyweight I ever saw. He was clever, could punch and could take the punch and would make the other fellow do just what he wanted him to do."

DAN MORGAN (a manager whose career dates back to the John L. Sullivan days): "James J. Jeffries gets my vote. He had everything—punch, gameness, strength, stamina and cleverness."

JIMMY BRONSON (who at one time managed Gene Tunney). "Gene Tunney had everything a great fighter needs. He was exceptionally clever, a good puncher, could take a punch and, above all, knew what to do when hurt. He was a real champion of all champions."

BILLY ROCHE (who has refereed more world's championship bouts than any other man alive). "Jack Johnson. He had everything and was a real champion."

JOHNNY DUNDEE (former featherweight and junior lightweight champion). "Jack Dempsey is the best I ever saw. I never saw Johnson, Jeffries, Sullivan, Kilrain or any of the real old timers, but don't see how they could have been better than the Manassa Mauler."

BILLY McCARNEY (dean of all fight managers. Has managed and been associated with champions from the days of Sullivan until the present. He managed the fighter

Believer, 10 to 1, Is Victor by 2 Lengths in Tropical Event

Favorite Runs Out of Money After Bid

Balmacan Finishes 2d; Jockey Is Given Suspension.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 8.—The Bristol Stable's Believer, longest priced horse in the field of five, raced to an easy triumph in the 6 furlongs of the Fifth race here this afternoon. Closing at exactly 10 to 1, and with Apprentice Clayton Phillips doing the piloting, the 5-year-old gelded son of Omar Khayyam greeted the judges two lengths clear in 1:12 flat.

Mrs. F. P. Coltiletti's Balmacan just lasted to nose out J. U. Gratton's Highest Point for the place. Toano, closing at approximately 3 to 5, was the third favorite in five races to finish out of the money.

Watson Suspended.

Georgie Watson, who rode Balmacan, drew a five-day suspension from the stewards for rough riding.

Toano got away on top. The mare stole a daylight advantage over Balmacan, while Phillips rated Believer in third position. Toano showed the distress signal and gradually dropped out of it while Believer charged up to dispute the issue with Balmacan around the last bend. Showing the benefit of one local start, Believer easily moved clear in the final furlong. Highest Point came along with a rush in the final sixteenth to threaten Balmacan's right to the place.

Wayne Wright rounded out a triple on the $19.10 shot, Big Gawk, which won the sixth event by a length and a half.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENESIS, $28.50, $15.30, $8.70; SAY DO, $24.80, $11.00; ON APPROVAL, $7.80.

GENESIS, away well, followed pace to the middle of the turn, where he was sent up on outside and, closing gamely, won going away. SAY DO circled field and finished gamely. ON APPROVAL lacked early speed, but came with a belated rush. VITASCOPE came from far back. OLD IRONSIDES ran into lead on turn, but stopped to a walk.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $600. For 2-year-old maiden colts and geldings. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:43. Winner, George D. Widener's b. g. (2), by Jamestown—Crepuscule. Trained by W. P. Wheeland. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:35 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANDLELIGHT, $9.50, $4.90, $4.80; DARK FRIEND, $9.60, $7.50; BRAVO CARUSO, $5.20.

CANDLELIGHT broke alertly, was sent to the front, opened wide gap and won nicely in hand. DARK FRIEND was hustled along all the way and ran good race. BRAVO CARUSO, on the inside, ran good race. ADDIS ABABA, very mean at the gate, broke from the outside, failed to show any speed and was badly beaten at end. GRAND JESTER is a fine looking colt and is sure to win races.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:13½. Winner, Mrs. H. McIlvain's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALBUQUERQUE, $16.80, $7.20, $2.90; DIXIE PRINCESS, $4.90, $2.40; AMQUI, $2.20.

ALBUQUERQUE, showing remarkable improvement over his recent races, broke alertly, rushed into lead, saved ground, tired, but eamely held on. DIXIE PRINCESS moved up with a rush around turn, stood long drive well. AMQUI got away fast, but stopped to a walk. SCINTILLA closed a big gap. FALSERMIAN had no mishap.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $167.80.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easing up; place, driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:41½. Winner, Mrs. B. N. Kane's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DE VALERA, $4.20, $2.70, $2.80; INSULATED, $6.00, $4.70; CENTERMARCH, $4.80.

DE VALERA was much the best. He was rated along back of the pace, ran into lead around turn, drew out and at end was being eased. INSULATED displayed good speed and made a game effort. CENTERMARCH came around field and would have been second in a few more strides. GALLOPING showed good race. PRYOR bled.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:13½. Winner, Jesse Stahl's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELIEVER, $22.00, $10.60, $8.20; BALMACAN, $8.90, $5.60; HIGHEST POINT, $5.00.

BELIEVER, got away fast, was allowed to gallop along back of the fast early pace, came around field entering stretch, took lead in final furlong and won going away. BALMACAN raced TOANO into defeat and held on well. HIGHEST POINT dropped back early, but finished with a rush. TOANO had plenty of speed for half a mile, then tired. THUNDERTONE is worth noting.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. The Miccosukee. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:41½. Winner, Mrs. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG GAWK, $19.10, $7.30, $5.60; BRANDON PRINCE, $6.20, $5.60; VOTE BOY, $8.80.

BIG GAWK was well ridden. He was steered to the outside in run down back stretch, moved up fast entering final furlong, assumed lead, but had to be driven out to win. BRANDON PRINCE closed a big gap and was a fast going second. VOTE BOY was rushed into lead, set fast pace, but weakened suddenly. RED ROAMER tired badly. SHOT PROOF was never a serious factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:11. Winner, Braedalbane Stable's b. g. (3), by St. Brideaux—Fair Rosalind. Trained by W. J. Hirsch. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KENDAL GREEN, $5.90, $4.30, $3.80; SOMERSAULT, $6.40, $4.30; FREE SPIRIT, $4.80.

KENDAL GREEN, lucky to escape the crowding on first turn, moved up fast in last half mile, drew away at end. SOMERSAULT was rushed into lead going into first turn, set fast pace, but crowded FREE SPIRIT on the rail all through the stretch. FREE SPIRIT was running gamely when blocked. SYLVIA G. stopped badly. JOAN D. was crowded into the fence going into first turn, fell, and SWEET GUINEA fell over her.

whom he nominates, whose career was halted at 21 when he was killed in a bout with Billy Papke). "Luther McCarthy, and not because I managed him, because I've managed many a champion since that day. He had the speed afoot of a lightweight and was never in a false position. He had mastered six punches, each one deadly. He could hit as hard with his left as right. He was a wonderfully clever boxer, but if the occasion demanded, he would step in and slug it out with the best of them. Barring Corbett and Johnson, he was the only heavyweight I ever saw who knew how to take advantage of openings brought about by clever feinting."

ABE ATTELL (former featherweight champion)—"Johnson was the best. He had everything and knew what to do with it."

JOE WOODMAN (formerly manager of Sam Langford)—"No one in the world could beat Langford when he was going good. Johnson always refused to meet him after he got the title. Sam could do anything any other fighter ever did—and do it a little better than anyone else."

BILLY GIBSON (who managed, among others, Gene Tunney)—"Gene Tunney was the best that ever lived and proved it against Dempsey in Chicago."

TOM O'ROURKE (who managed Wolcott, Dixon and other great boxers)—"Bob Fitzsimmons could knock out any one with a punch, was clever, game and never refused to fight anybody, even though he never weighed more than 170 pounds."

WILLIAM A. BRADY (former manager of Jim Corbett): "Corbett beat John L. Sullivan when the Boston Strong Boy would have beaten any other man that ever lived."

JOE HUMPHRIES (famous announcer): "Bob Fitzsimmons was the greatest fighter I ever saw, and I've seen 'em all."

TOMMY BURNS (who lost the heavyweight title to Jack Johnson): "Jack Johnson could have beaten any man in the world—and I don't say that just because he beat me. Look at all the others he murdered."

MAJ. HARVEY L. MILLER (secretary D. C. Boxing Commission): "James J. Jeffries was the best man in the world the night he beat Corbett the second time."

JIMMY LAKE (announcer, who has been around fights more years than he looks old): "Pound for pound, the equal of Bob Fitzsimmons never lived. Look at the men he beat—and the weight he conceded them."

Steel Resumes Upswing After Holiday Lull

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 8.—The steel industry has come out of the holiday lull with a rise in the ingot production to 51 per cent of capacity, compared with 47½ per cent a week ago, Iron Age stated today in its weekly review. The rebound was shared in by most producing centers, the South being the only important district to show a slower rate of operations.

"Part of the recovery in mill operations," said the review, "is based on orders that accumulated during the holiday period. There also has been a carryover of anticipatory orders for products that advanced in price January 1, such as semifinished steel, track bolts and spikes and cold-finished bars.

Automobile Demand Abated.

"Pressure for steel on the part of the automobile industry has relaxed and there is a possibility that the initial bulge in motor car output is over, with the future trend of assemblies dependent on the course of retail demand. However, the appearance of sizabl automotive inquiries in the Cleveland district, some of them covering February and March requirements instead of one month's needs, is an encouraging development.

"At Pittsburgh and Chicago, where railroad buying is on the upward trend, mills expect to accumulate substantial tonnages in heavy rolled products. The Santa Fé has supplemented its purchase of 58,302 tons of rails with orders for 17,804 tons of track accessories.

"Pig iron production in December totaled 2,106,453 tons, or 67,950 tons a day, as compared with 2,066,913 tons or 68,864 tons daily, in November. Total output for 1935 was 21,007,802 tons, compared with 15,911,188 tons in 1934, a gain of 32 per cent.

"Steel ingot output in December was 3,081,807 tons, compared with 3,153,247 tons in November. Total output of Bessemer and open hearth ingots in 1935 was 33,425,576 tons, a gain of 30.57 per cent over 1934.

London Silver Up, Unchanged Here

The London quotation increased 1-16 of a penny to 20 13-16 pence a standard ounce, equivalent to 46.24 cents a fine ounce in New York, under the impetus of moderate Indian buying.

First Canadian Cattle Reach Chicago Market

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—Canadian cattle, the first imported to Chicago market since the new reciprocal trade pact between the United States and Canada became effective, trickled through slaughtering houses today.

Approximately 140 Canadian beeves appeared. Packers bought approximately 60 head. The remainder went to feeders for fattening. It was understood the "Canadians" brought around $7.85. Most of the slaughter steers from the domestic corn belt brought $7.65 to $11.

A load of Canadian cattle, averaging 1,400 pounds sold for $10.25 per hundredweight shortly before the market closed.

Texas Crude Prices Raised 15c a Barrel

Oil Producers Will Get $2,000,000 More a Month.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 8.—Oil struck a price gusher today—the first of consequence since 1933. An advance of 10 to 15 cents a barrel for crude was posted by two major Texas companies—Sun and Humble. Oilmen believed other companies in the Midcontinent high-gravity area would follow suit. The 15-cent increase will mean an addition of approximately $2,000,000 monthly to the east Texas field income. The prices are effective at 7 a. m. tomorrow.

J. G. Pew, of Sun Oil's Dallas office, said his company's price rise would affect approximately 65,000 barrels daily.

The new schedules of the Sun Co., announced by J. Edgar Pew, of Philadelphia, through the Dallas operating office, include a 15-cent advance to $1.15 for east Texas crude and a rise of 15 cents for Conroe on a gravity basis ranging from $1.24 to $1.34 a barrel.

Humble Meets Sun Price.

Sun postings for all territories were met by Humble, biggest buyer of Texas oil.

The industry has been talking price increase for months without definite commitment.

J. Edgar Pew explained the price advance as "the first tangible benefit to oil producers by reason of the production control measures of the State and the co-ordination of these State measures under the interstate oil compact."

The Humble, a subsidiary of the Standard of New Jersey, buys approximately 250,000 barrels daily.

Producers had hoped the price boost would be 25 cents a barrel. Purchasers countered, however, with arguments that such an increase was not warranted with gasoline consumption at its lowest point of the year. After warmer weather brings more travel, there may be another increase, oil men said.

Gen. Motors Reports Total Year's Sales

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—General Motors Corporation reported today that 1935 sales to consumers in the United States totaled 1,278,996 cars and trucks compared with 927,493 in 1934.

Sales to dealers in the United States last year were 1,370,934, compared with 959,494 in the previous year, and total sales to dealers in both the United States and Canada, plus overseas shipments, were 1,715,688 in 1935, compared with 1,240,447 in 1934.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Advance More Vigorously as Confidence Spreads; Bonds Actively Higher.

New York, Jan. 8.—With a turnover of more than 3,500,000 shares the stock market developed greater strength than has been seen in recent weeks. Morning dealings were active, the volume in the first hour being over 1,000,000 shares, sufficient to send the ticker tape many minutes behind the market. Profit taking put the brakes on trading in the afternoon, but prices were fairly well held. Bonds were strong in the lower grades. Commodities were mixed. May wheat dropped ¾ of a cent to 102¼ cents a bushel.

Stocks had something more than relief from New Deal pressure, prophecies and requests for inflation and the like to sustain and encourage them. Mid-week trade indices were favorable. Freight car loadings last week, preliminary reports indicated, rose 8 per cent over a year ago and 16 per cent over the previous week. The steel industry's operations increased. Production of electricity last week continued to climb over the corresponding period of a year ago.

Only four groups failed to join the advance, and they were irregular—the metals, motors, mail orders and merchants. In the main they were sections that some feared might suffer some temporary loss of sales if doles to farmers were stopped. Groups that developed special strength were the steels, chemicals and tobaccos.

New High Prices.

Most of the communications stocks mounted to new high levels. Radio, Telephone and Western Union were the favorites. Pullman led the railroad equipments into advanced territory on talk of increased business all round. Among the public utilities, Commonwealth & Southern retained its lead in activity. The best price duplicated the highest of 1934. Allied Chemical jumped 7 points, rounding out a dozen points gain since announcement of preferred stock retirement.

Receivership rails—Great Western, Milwaukee, North Western and Rock Island were active. Fractional gains were the rule, meaning appreciation of 10 to 30 per cent. Westinghouse continued its rise to the highest ground since 1931 on a gain of 2 points. Western Union fetched the most money per share in five years on a climb of 3 points. Steel recrossed the 50 mark, for the first time in two months. Specialties to rise 2 to 5 points included Seating, Childs, Crown Cork, Owens Glass, Electric Boat, Greyhound, Helme, Smith and Union Bag.

Although Government bonds were by no means as buoyant as other grades, no great attention was given in the money and investment markets to the current attack by radicals against the Federal Reserve system or to the suggestions that a fresh campaign against the dollar be instituted. The outlook for the Treasury's deficit is becoming a bit clearer namely, that the figure will mount; but for all that banks perforce must hold most of their Government bonds, and money is as plentiful as ever. Foreign currecies were inactive. Francs were a shade easier and sterling was higher, as it usually is at this season.

Poor Enough Now.

Commodity prices have come a long way to catch up with depreciated dollars and doubtless they will finish the route, but the safest course is for reduction of surplus stocks of raw materials through greater consumption. Merely to give them a higher stated value will tend further to cut down our foreign trade by lifting our costs here and our selling prices abroad and to narrow the margin between wages and living costs.

Moreover, what still is greatly needed is confidence in a stable currency. More than anything else, any further tinkering with the currency at the behest of those seeking inflation for inflation's sake will put a stop to business recovery and set us back much beyond 1933. What is needed is a little breath holding in this breathing spell, lest the country wake up to the sort of money it now has and lose confidence in it.

First Over.

Westinghouse, jubilant over the prospect of a good golden anniversary celebration, managed yesterday to be first to jump over the 100-a-share bar in the 1936 race. Some of the other contestants were Case, Manville (the favorite), Chrysler (at one time looking like a sure winner) and Coca-Cola. Case crossed the line last year, but fell back, and is now handicapped by the fall of the AAA.

Preferred.

Westinghouse has a small amount of preferred stock, which is entitled to 7 per cent dividends (on $50 par value) and to an equal share with the common after $3.50 a share has been paid on the latter. The preferred has equal voting power with the common. Although the trend of the times is to elimination of preferred stock issues, especially those bearing a high dividend obligation, Westinghouse preferred is not callable.

Republic.

Published reports that Republic Steel is about to take over Gulf States seem to be a bit premature, at least. For the past three years, officials admit, informal discussions of such a merger have been held, certain Republic Steel groups pressing for it. They have held for years 37 per cent of Gulf States stock, and possibly have added to it, but that is ample for working control. Just the same, no proposition has been laid before either board. Rumor mongers have suggested that Republic might be looking with longing toward Youngstown. Eventually both might join with Republic and cause no surprise in Wall Street.

General Motors.

General Motors sales report for December was a favorable one. Sales to consumers were only 10 per cent under the heavy November business, and were three times as large as in the last month of 1934, when the usual shutdown in advance of new model introduction cut into sales. Total sales to dealers and shipments overseas were a few thousand larger than in November. For the year, all sales and shipments abroad increased nearly 39 per cent over 1934. Last year undoubtedly marked hearty rejuvenation of the automotive industry. Sales for the current month will be examined for indications of how much, if any, borrowing from 1936 was done by 1935.

Landis Bull Market.

Chairman Landis, of SEC, seems to have changed his mind a bit on the causes of the next market boom. Some time ago when President Gay, of the stock exchange, said he thought the responsibility for an inflationary boom in stocks, if one should occur, would rest upon the Federal Reserve Board, in charge of credit, that view was concurred in by Mr. Landis. Both were at that time emphasizing the statement that regulation of trading was full and satisfactory.

Chase Bank Sells Holdings In Big Utility

Trust Units Buy 42 Per Cent of United Light & Power Co.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 8.—One of the largest public utility deals since the financial crash of 1929 was effected today with the disclosure of arrangements for the sale of Chase National Bank's 42 per cent holdings of United Light & Power Co. voting stock to a group of investment trusts.

The transaction involves the transfer of 448,667 class B. voting shares of the $871,000,000 electric power concern, one of the largest in the Midwest area, to trust units affiliated with the banking firms of J. & W. Seligman & Co., and Field, Glore & Co. and Harrison Williams, a holder of large amounts of utility securities.

Spokesmen for the purchasing group declined to reveal the amount paid for the holdings and Chase Bank interests were equally silent. There was no formal announcement of the deal but it was made known by the purchasers that virtually all of the details of the transaction have been completed.

The buying group consists of American Cities Power & Light Corporation, and Electric Shareholdings Corporation, the Harrison Williams units; Tri-Continental Corporation, Selected Industries, and Blue Ridge Corporation of the Seligman concern, and the Chicago Corporation, associated with Field, Glore & Co.

Shares to Be Allotted.

Proportions of the United Light shares to be distributed among the trusts were not revealed, but representatives of the group asserted that each unit was acquiring its allotted share of the stock for permanent investment.

This would mean the scattering of the largest single minority holding in the United Co., and one whose ultimate disposition had been a matter for much speculation in Wall street circles since the Chase Bank became the owner.

Other large holdings, though considerably smaller than those of the Chase Bank, are in possession of the Koppers interests, controlled by the Mellons and the U. S. and International Securities Corporation, an investment company affiliated with the banking firm of Dillon, Read & Co.

The Chase holdings were originally the property of Continental Shares Co., in which Cyrus S. Eaton, of Cleveland, was the dominant figure. They were pledged, with other securities, with the bank for loans on which Continental Shares subsequently defaulted.

In addition to the B stock the investment trusts also purchased around $1,000,000 face value of Continental Gas & Electric bonds, 5s of 1958, and $658,000 of United Light & Railways 5½s of 1952, both being subsidiaries of United.

United Light & Power properties are situated in Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia and Wisconsin. The company is also a large producer of natural gas and operates extensive transportation service.

Daily Oil Output Up 39,600 Barrels

By the Associated Press.

Production of crude petroleum in the United States during November was announced yesterday by the Bureau of Mines as totaling 86,476,000 barrels, a daily average of 2,882,500. This represents an increase of 39,600 in the daily average from the previous month.

Natural gasoline produced during the month totaled 3,598,000 barrels compared with 3,240,000 a year ago. Benzol produced was 90,252,000 compared with 75,760,00 in November, 1934. Stocks of crude oil on November 30 totaled 315,558,000 barrels, declining 1,597,000. This compared with the October decline of 3,550,000 barrels.

Power Output Gains 11.2 Per Cent in Year

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Electric power production for the week ended January 4 was 11.2 per cent greater than in the same week a year ago, according to the weekly report of the Edison Electric Institute.

Output of 1,854,874,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,847,264,000 the week before, an increase of 0.4 per cent, a slightly more than seasonal rise.

New York Listed Stocks Up 2 Billions in Month

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—The open market value of shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange rose $1,994,991,000 during December to a total of $46,945,581,555, according to a compilation released by the exchange today.

The January 1 average market value on shares was $35.62, against $34.34 on December 1 and $25.59 on January 1, 1935.

British Woolworth.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—F. W. Woolworth & Co., Ltd., English variety store chain, reported earnings today for the year ended December 31, 1935, of £5,298,404 (about $26,121,131), after charging all expenses, including depreciation and manager's remuneration but before providing for taxation. This compares with 1934 profit of £4,879,949 (about $24,058,148).

Lerner Stores Plans 2 to 1 Stock Split-Up

New York, Jan. 8.—Directors of Lerner Stores Corporation have recommended that the present common stock of the corporation be split up on a basis of two shares for one, and a special meeting of the holders of the common stock has been called to vote on the proposal.

If the plan is approved, Lerner Stores will have 600,000 shares of common stock authorized, of which 200,000 will be unissued and 400,000 will be outstanding.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

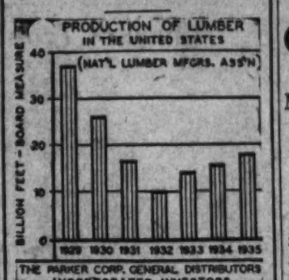
Lumber Industry A Recovery Leader



Boston, Mass., Jan. 8.—Production of lumber in 1935 was 75 per cent above the depression low of 1932. Residential building and the furniture industry are the largest consumers of lumber. Lumber production leads in ten States in number of wage earners employed.

Penn. Road Votes Dividend of $1

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 8.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. today announced a dividend of $1 a share on the capital stock, an increase of 50 cents a share over the previous dividend paid in March, 1935. The distribution is payable February 29 to stock of record January 22 and involves a payment of more than $13,000,000 to the road's stockholders.

The current payment, charged to 1935 income, is the only disbursement against last year's earnings. In the final analysis, it was pointed out, stockholders will receive the same amount out of last year's profits as from the previous year's earnings, the dividends from 1934 earnings having been made in two 50-cent payments in March, 1935, and September, 1934.

It was estimated 1935 will show an income of about $1.75 a share.

Montgomery Ward Sales Set All-Time Record

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. today reported sales of $287,593,35 for the 11 months ended December 31, the highest for any corresponding period in the company's history. The 11 months' total was an increase of 17 per cent over the corresponding 1934 period.

December sales also were the best in history, totaling $39,474,902, an increase of 13 per cent compared with December, 1934.

Berry to Manage French Line Here

Jean Berry has been transferred from the New York office of the French Line to become general agent here, succeeding Harry Murphy, who will go to New York as assistant passenger traffic manager. In 1933 Berry came from Paris to head the booking division of the passenger department for the French Line in New York and shortly thereafter was appointed assistant traffic manager. The new Washington agent is a brother of Andre Berry, the French poet.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

Jan. 8.—London—A fairly active trade prevailed on the stock exchange today. Transatlantic issues held firm in sympathy with the Wall street market. Industrials, shipping and rubber shares received the most attention and advanced, while British funds improved on renewed investment buying. Other sections were neglected. The market closed firmer.

Paris—Wall street advances reflected favorably on the bourse today with rentes, bank and industrial shares regaining part of their recent losses. International issues were strong. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—After an uncertain opening, prices on the boerse advanced today and held their gains until the close.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 8 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Moderate quantities of wools were sold in the Boston market at firm to rising prices. Strictly combing territory wools of the finer grades brought 85-87 cents scoured basis for 64s and finer and 83-86 cents for 58s, 80s, ½ blood. Strictly combing 56s, ¾ blood and 48s, 50s, ¼ blood Ohio and similar fleeces sold at 39-40 cents in the grease.

Wheat Declines With Prospect Of Bigger Yield

Millers' Buying Likely to Be Restricted to Immediate Needs.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Indication domestic millers would buy only to fill immediate needs pending more definite appraisal of 1936 crops gave wheat a decided downward impetus late today.

Heavy snowfalls in Southwest and West likely to enlarge domestic winter wheat production tended to encourage sellers, and so likewise did Northwest reports of probable increased planting of spring wheat because of removal of Government control of acreage. No big new purchasing of flour was reported.

Wheat closed weak, ⅝ to 1⅛ under yesterday's finish; May, 102⅛ to 102¼; corn, ⅜ to ⅞ off; May, 61¼ to 61⅝; oats, ¼ to ⅜ down, and provisions showing 15 to 32 cents drop.

Apple Mary — By Martha Orr

On The Air Today

THIS "Round and Round" thing has gone far enough, methinks.

Two weeks ago it was a novelty; one week ago it was a terrific, furious rage. Today it is becoming a weird nightmare. By the hour it is becoming ghastly, unreal.

Tuesday night it caused the calm and placid Fred Waring to go slightly berserk. Toward the end of his program, Waring's organization gently brought up the strains of the Onyx Club's brain child—and before Waring could go into his measured announcement of what would inevitably follow, his studio audience cheered. Think of that!

You could hear them cheer. They cheered loudly and with great enthusiasm. And then Waring did a remarkable thing. He reproved them! Yes, sir. He spoke with enormous conviction; he bluntly commented on the taste of some folks! He advised the audience with a vocal animation quite unlike his customary announcements that "Round and Round" was probably the silliest song ever known—and that he was probably just as silly to consent to play it.

Then followed "Round and Round," with Johnny and Stella and all the gang performing nobly in what must have been a period of agony for the maestro. And if you believe the audience took its shaming seriously, you can guess again. It applauded, and applauded—and applauded more. And while the applause showed no letup, the boss of the Warings in sad tones announced the sweet tune to follow.

Oh, well. Mr. Waring should know by this time that the public will not be sandbagged into a state of someone else's musical appreciation. Give 'em what they like, say I.

But I wish "Round and Round" would curl up and die—tonight!

"March of Time" is pursuing its off again, on again way. Now comes an announcement that the nightly quarter-hours are finished. A new series of Thursday night weekly half-hours will be inaugurated soon. The same announcement was made in December.

Phil Cook, veteran of the air and possessor of a bagful of voice tricks, is on your dials again. C. B. S. presents Phil and his wife, Flo, in "Just Another Amateur," WJSV, at 9:30 these Thursday nights. It is Mrs. Cook's first radio venture, and to make it different Cook says that she will be the straight performer and he will be the stooge. It is a program with a plot.

LEGAL NOTICES

E. BARRETT PRETTYMAN and WALTER L. FOWLER, Attorneys for Petitioners. District Building.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, holding a District Court. In re: Condemnation of land for the extension of Maryland avenue, Seventeenth street and H street northeast, and the widening of Seventeenth street northeast in the District of Columbia, District Court No. 2383. Notice and order of publication. Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia pursuant to a certain provision of the Act of Congress, approved March 4, 1913, entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1914, and for other purposes," whereby they are authorized to open, extend or widen any street, avenue, road or highway to conform with the plan of the permanent system of highways in that portion of the District of Columbia outside of the Cities of Washington and Georgetown adopted under the Act of Congress approved March 2, 1893, as amended by the Acts of Congress approved June 28, 1898, and May 28, 1908, respectively, by condemnation under the provisions of subchapter 1 of chapter XV of the code of law for the District of Columbia, have filed a petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the extension of Maryland avenue, Seventeenth street and H street northeast, and the widening of Seventeenth street northeast, in the District of Columbia, as shown upon map or plat filed with the said petition, a part thereof, and praying also that this court empanel a jury in accordance with the law provided for in such cases to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the said extension of Maryland avenue, Seventeenth street, and H street northeast, and the widening of Seventeenth street northeast, in the District of Columbia, and the condemnation of the land necessary for said purposes thereof, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, plus all or any part of the costs and expenses of said proceedings, upon any lands which the jury may find will be benefited, as provided for in and by the aforesaid Act of Congress approved May 28, 1908. It is by the court this 6th day of January, 1936, ordered that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be and they are hereby warned and commanded to appear in this court on or before the 12TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1936, AT 10 O'CLOCK A. M., and continue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits by the jury to be empaneled and sworn herein; and it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published twice a week for two successive weeks in the Washington Evening Star, The Washington Post and the Washington Herald, newspapers published in the said District, commencing at least twenty days before the said 12TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1936. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States marshal, or his deputies, upon each of the owners of the fee of the land to be condemned herein, as may be found by the said marshal, or his deputies, within the District of Columbia, and upon the tenants and occupants of the same, before the said 12TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1936, by the Court: C. H. LUHRING, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. By: C. W. STEWART, Jr., Assistant Clerk. Jan6,10,16,17.

Earl Maxwell Plans N. Y. Trip To Save Sister

He and Lawyer to Confer on Final Strategy; Motion Next Week.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Attorneys for Edith Maxwell, the mountain school teacher under sentence of 25 years in prison for the killing of her father, will hold a final conference this week on the strategy for presenting her motion for a new trial to be heard next Wednesday.

Earl Maxwell, her brother, will meet today with Charles Henry Smith, an outstanding Virginia criminal lawyer retained by The Post to fight for the girl's freedom.

The girl's brother is scheduled to go to New York City in quest of evidence, which the defense hopes to be able to present to Circuit Court Judge H. A. W. Skeen, in Wise, Va., in support of their move.

Although the exact nature of the evidence was not disclosed, it is believed to relate to the condition of the brain of Trigg Maxwell, the girl's father, when an autopsy was performed on the body.

Jury Angle Considered.

Newly discovered evidence to the effect that the blows from the girl's slipper could not have caused death is expected to be the principal argument of the defense in their plea to give the girl a chance to tell her story anew to a jury.

Other arguments will revolve about the constitutionality of a Virginia statute, which excludes women from juries. M. J. Fulton, a Richmond attorney, is expected to argue that the statute is contrary to the United States Constitution.

concerning a battleship replacement program, Swanson declared that no final decision would be made until the results of the London naval conference are known.

Under the provisions of the Washington and London naval limitation treaties, which expire at the end of this year, a holiday on battleship building is mandatory among all signatories.

Seven of America's 15 battleships will be over-age in 1937 as a consequence of the cessation of building activity in 1922. Swanson explained that, although there were no funds provided in the 1937 budget, it might be possible to get the necessary money from a deficiency bill, if it were decided to resume battleship construction.

Dr. Peacock Killing Still Baffles Police

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—The strange killing of Dr. Silber C. Peacock, brilliant child specialist, appeared headed for the limbo of unsolved murder mysteries, detectives indicated tonight.

The criminologists delved again into the intricacies surrounding the case, but apparently were no nearer a solution than they were Friday night when the pediatrician's body—bullet-pierced and knife-wounded—was found in his automobile on the North Side.

Step by step they went over the case records of the slain physician's list of patients hoping for a clew which might lead to the name of a demented parent who imagined a motive, but were unable to uncover information of value.

Likewise they investigated the possibility that Dr. Peacock was slain as a result of mistaken identity, but without result.

Investigators turned to the neighborhood to which Dr. Peacock was lured by a telephone call and slain Thursday night.

Gov. Tingley Receives Death Threat in Mail

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 8 (AP). A threat against Gov. Clyde Tingley unless $12,000 is paid has been received in the mails, Police Chief Pat O'Grady disclosed today.

O'Grady said the writer obviously suffered from delusions that the Governor was to blame for an attempt to run him down with a truck.

"I will bump him (Tingley) off from above with the plane before he gets me," O'Grady quoted from the letter. It was turned over to postal authorities. City officials also were threatened.

Rain Forecast Here as Snow Falls in West

Montana Mountaineers Search for Ranger; Miners Rescued.

Washington youngsters looked longingly at sleds and skis yesterday afternoon as large white snow flakes came pelting out of a winter-gray sky, but their anticipation was premature.

The snow melted as soon as it struck the ground and later the falling flakes turned to rain. Furthermore, the Weather Bureau said last night, the routine probably will be repeated this morning.

Temperatures yesterday stayed above freezing, the bureau reported, ranging from a low of 33 at 6 a. m. to a high of 38 about 3 p. m. The coldest official reading today is expected to be about 35 early this morning with temperatures during the day to be slightly warmer than those yesterday.

The Middle West, at least, was experiencing the same brand of winter weather. Snow fell in Minnesota, Iowa and the northern portions of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, the Associated Press reported, while the southern sections of most of these States were doused with rain.

The far West, however, was enacting drama that read like the memoirs of an Arctic explorer.

On Independence Mountain in Montana, mountaineers on skis and snow shoes searched for John Norby, a forest ranger, who was caught in an avalanche last Sunday while hunting for Jack Tracy, a trapper since reported safe.

Imprisoned since last Sunday in a snow-bound mountain cabin 26 miles from Alpine, Wyo., 20 miners and their families were reached by rescuers yesterday. They were to be moved to a main highway.

Grave flood danger threatened Alabama yesterday as heavy rains bright rivers menacingly above flood levels. Warnings were broadcast and families moved from homes in the lowlands along the Alabama River, which had risen in places to 45 feet, 15 feet above flood level.

Fifty families had already been evacuated from North Montgomery to a transient camp on higher ground. Swollen rivers were causing damage yesterday also in northern Georgia and in Tennessee.
